While George was "straightening things up" he opened the closet door that contains his janitorial supplies. Then it happened-Poof!

Flames and smoke filled the room and surrounded George. He noted a fire extinguisher on the wall.

"Nope," he said, "too small." He was about to leave the room when a Spartan Daily reporter called, Hey! Do you want this hose?

Well, that saved the day. Fortunately George had been water-ing the lawn while he was upstairs in the lounge. The reporter had seen the smoke and flames and had a hunch George needed assistance. He (the re-porter) waded through the water spurting from the sprinkler and grabbed the hose. Frantically, he waved the cumbersome outfit in the air in an effort to get the sprinkler (which was still sprinkling) into the window to George.

Meanwhile, back at the Coop kitchen, a pleasant woman with a pleasing smile said to the wet reporter, "Now you cut that out! All that water is coming down

"But lady, there's a fire up-"Coop saver."

Her next comment wasn't quotable but it had the flavor of anger toward water-fighting collegians. George finally put out the fire. The Coop was saved but it cost George his lunch and coat-to say

1901884 Dear Thrust and Parry,

Dr. Robert North, who just returned from an extensive tour of the Soviet Union and the Orient, told a large audience assembled in the Concert Hall Wednesday night that Russian youths are aware of the freedoms they have and also realize what freedoms they don't have.

This point was quite startling, because we have been led to believe that the younger generation in the Soviet Union has been indoctrinated so thoroughly with the collectivist philosophy that they are not even aware that any other system exists, i.e., "They don't know anything better."

But even more important, this revelation substantiates our belief that man is born free and his right to free choice is inherent. Even though the Russian people are forced to submit to an oppressive oligarchy, they will never lose the will to exercise their inalienable right to freedom of choice. Isn't it time that each fight the present trend toward a collectivised economy here in America?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Cincinnati Redlegs and St. Louis Cardinals have played checkers with six players.

Redlegs moved first baseman George Crowe, southpaw Alex Kellner and infielder Alex Grammas to St. Louis. The Cardinals countered with infielder Eddie Kasko, pitcher Bob Mabe and out-fielder Del Ennis. General Manager Gabe Paul and field skipper Mayo Smith handled negotiations for Cincinnati. General Man-ager Bing Devine and Manager Solly Hemus okayed the Cardinal end.

Burdette has been explosive on the hill against the Yanks in four World Series tilts. Perhaps the name of his home town in West Virginia has some significance-Nitro.

Nervous Lew has no great amour for the Bombers. He is now adding insult to injury. After stopping the Yankees 13-5 for his latest personal triumph Thursday, Burdette commented, "I'd sure like to see the Yanks in our league.

But the performances of one pitcher against any club does not guarantee team supremacy over an entire season. Remember it took Milwaukee the full seven games to send each Yankee home a few thousand dollars poorer last year.

If this Series proves nothing else, it should punch a few holes in the "Breakfast of Champions" theory. Not that the slogan is bad. It's just that the new muscle-builder and producer of champions is an edible peculiar to Breweryville known as bratwurst.

"Hot dog" are two naughty words among the Milwaukee fans. Why, without a bratwurst, you're just not with it, man.
