Violent death inspires sixth walk-a-thon

By Christine M. Lias
Staff Writer

Shortly after school got out last June, 18-year-old Shannon Connors was busy planning for the upcoming summer with her 1-year-old son, Eddie.

Her dreams of a future with her son were dashed suddenly on a public street in Fremont. Witnesses claim that her ex-boyfriend shot and killed Connors in front of her baby son before turning the gun on himself.

"High school- and college-age is a crucial time to talk to about date violence. Women and their children have the right to be safe," said Janice Anderman, developmental director of SAVE, Shelter Against Violent Environments.

The month of October has been designated "National Domestic Violence Awareness Month." In memory of Connors, this Sunday marks the sixth annual Walk Away From Violence in Fremont from 1 to 4 p.m., a 5K course intended to raise money and awareness of local support groups against domestic violence.

Anderman estimates that a few hundred men, women and children will give three-hours of their time to walk around Lake Elizabeth in Fremont's Central Park this weekend.

"The event has been very successful in the past. Last year, we raised $10,000 from 100 volunteers...in 100 degree weather to boot!" Anderman said.

Weather predictions aside, the walk-a-thon aims to raise money for SAVE, a non-profit group that offers services for battered women in southern Alameda County. SAVE operates a 30-bed shelter, at an undisclosed location for safety reasons, helps the women find transitional housing and donates food, clothing, legal and job advice.

SJSU student Michael Nanna does the "hula" at "Grease Live." The carnival at the Seventh Street Plaza was organized by Recreation and Leisure Studies students.

'Grease Livens' up campus

Kids used to get in trouble for cutting class to see traveling fairs or circuses.

Recreation and Leisure Studies Department students brought the carnival to the campus Wednesday. The class of 1997 organized a small carnival put on with a '50s atmosphere at the Seventh Street Plaza.

"We're calling it 'Grease Live,'" said Therapeutic Recreation major Cindy Chan. "We wanted a carnival atmosphere and the 'Grease' theme fit well. To me 'Grease' (the movie) is like the Brady Bunch. I grew up on it."

According to Chan, over 200 students laughed, danced and sang to the soundtrack of "Grease" from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Students could throw a bean bag through a clown's mouth, toss a ping pong ball in a small floating cardboard car and swing a hula hoop around their waste five times to win the large prizes. To win a small prize a student only had to complete one of the three.

"It was easy," English major

Saud Al Mesri said. "I saw the shirt on the table so I thought I'd try to win it. It was a fun break from class and it was easy to win."

The event was organized by six Recreation and Leisure Studies students who were fulfilling a requirement for their course.

"It's a program where students apply program planning, promotional skills and leadership skills," said Recreation and Leisure Studies Department adviser Steve Dowling. "Part of the

Sister city celebrates alliance

San Jose delegates and mayor travel to Okayama, Japan for 40th anniversary

Hamburgers no longer cost a quarter and Elvis is dead. Still, some things never change in 40 years.

Twenty-seven San Jose delegates will embark next week on a local diplomatic mission of sorts to Okayama, Japan to mark the 40th anniversary of the alliance that unites the two cities.

Mayor Susan Hammer, seven city officials and 19 members of the non-profit group Pacific Neighbors will travel a full ocean's length to represent Silicon Valley. Okayama is one of seven such "sister city" relationships that San Jose maintains.

"The whole idea of having a sister city is based on a vision of getting people-to-people diplomacy to further world peace," said Rudy Navarro, the City of San Jose liaison.

Currently, Hammer is on her own goodwill trip, touring industrial sites in Asia. She is expected to join the others in Okayama for the festivities.

The San Jose-Okayama connection was one of the first such relationships when it began in 1957. At the time, President Dwight Eisenhower had sanctioned the idea of holding international relationships and inspired the alliance, Navarro said.

Since that time, San Jose has added cities including San Jose, Costa Rica; Veracruz, Mexico; Tainan, Taiwan; Pune, India and Dublin, Ireland to its growing list of comrades.

Shortly after 1957, an exchange program fused between San Jose State University and Japan's Okayama University. The city of Okayama discontinued the program in 1990, after conflicts arose over the nature of students' studies.

"Every year, two SJSU students and two Japanese students would be exchanged. They didn't go to school as we know it, just more cultural and language courses," explained vice-president of Pacific

Library meeting open to opinions

By Yvonne Ohumukini-Urness
Staff Writer

Students will have the chance to air their opinions on the joint library that's being proposed by San Jose State University and the city of San Jose at an open meeting Saturday.

Hosting the town-hall style meeting regarding the venture between SJSU President Robert Caret and San Jose Mayor Susan Hammer will be the mayor's Joint Library Advisory Committee.

The committee, which has been convening since April, was appointed by the mayor and the city council.

"It is a multi-faceted group, comprised of representatives of both the city and university environments, the business community and the general public," said Paul Underwood, acting assistant librarian for the city of San Jose.

The meeting, Underwood said, is "wide-open," meaning that anyone who is interested in the project is welcome to attend.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the joint concept of the two libraries joining, Underwood said.

Alternate transportation theme of Rideshare Week

By Lisa Marie F. Arellano
Staff Writer

RIDES for Bay Area Commuters, Inc. pitched in during the BART strike. Now it's at it again.

Oct. 6 through 10 is California Rideshare week and by using an alternative way to commute, students may enter a raffle for a tropical trip for two and other prizes.

Students who wish to participate may pledge to carpool, ride their bike or use mass transit to school during Rideshare Week.

The raffle is sponsored by the RIDES, a non-profit corporation founded in 1977 during the nation's energy crisis to help commuters to seek alternative ways to commute.

RIDES operates a computer ride-matching system to help commuters find other people who they could carpool with, according to Katy Katzenberger of RIDES. Katzenberger said many people turn to the organization's carpool database especially during transportation such as the BART strike, which clogged Bay Area freeways last September. She said thousands of commuters who anticipated the traffic congestion sought the help of RIDES to find people to carpool

"We don't have enough parking facilities on campus to accommodate every student. We have to help them in some other way."

— Alfonso De Alba
acting director of Associated Students with. Katzenberger said their database of carpools from 12,000 entries to 17,000 during the BART strike.

"More and more people are learning the benefits of carpooling," Katzenberger said. "Commuters who carpool can use the diamond lanes which allows them to beat the bottleneck traffic in the other lanes. And those who use the Bay Bridge don't have to pay toll when they carpool."

However, Katzenberger said help with carpooling is not a strength when it comes to working with university students. "It's simply hard to find other people to carpool with who have the same schedules as students," Katzenberger said. "It is easier to match people who have a more typical working schedule of nine to five."

Alfonso De Alba, acting executive director of Associated Students, agrees. De Alba conducts annual surveys of students' commute habits to campus. Last year's survey found that 69 percent of students drive to school alone. Only 18 percent carpool to school.

"We have been encouraging students to share carpools with other students, but it is unfortunate that our carpool promotions hasn't been as successful as we wish it would be," De Alba said.

De Alba said the AS is working on developing a ride-matching system such as RIDES. He also said they are working on improving bicycle facilities to encourage students to ride their bikes to school.

"Transportation remains one of our biggest concerns," De Alba said. "We

Center improves care for mentally ill in SJ

By Yasko Agawa
Staff Writer

The Casa Feliz Nurse Managed Center is open to provide improved care for those with mental illness.

The center is a collaboration between San Jose State University, Alliance for Community Care and the County Mental Health Department.

Casa Feliz opened on Sept. 17 and is located about two blocks from campus on Ninth Street. It has 62 single rooms for clients, which is unusual for a mental health center, according to the center's social worker Carla Pet.

"Its difference is that it is really an independent setting," Pet said. "Each person gets one room and they have freedom to manage their time and medication."

The Casa Feliz center is the third facility for the Transdisciplinary Collaboration Project. Two additional centers are Crossroads Village in Morgan Hill and Zoe House on Eleventh Street. The idea of the project is to get people from different areas to offer high-quality service.

"Our goal is to manage our clients' lives (so they can) be independent," said Sandy Stokes, the nursing manager of Casa Feliz and an SJSU nursing graduate student. "We want to tell them how to recover, survive and live well. All those things are a package, not just nursing."

As a part of the class, five they know it is important for the students to remember they are learning from mental illness clients.

"Clients understand they are the teacher," said Eric Johns of Zoe House. "The exciting part of working with students is to see the change. They come with fear and anxiety but they realize that people here are not different. It's neat to see that change."

Students who visited Casa Feliz for the first time Sept. 23 are at the beginning stage.

"I am anxious," said Arlene Calaru, a senior nursing student. "This is a new facility and everything is new (to me)."

Confusion is inherent with lack of experience.

"A lot of clients are independent," said nursing student Zeniah Andres. "They don't look like they need our help. We don't know yet what we can do." Preparation is the important element for working at the centers and the students need to put time into it, Connolly said.

Alliance for Community Care, a nonprofit provider of mental health services in Santa Clara County, is one of the main agencies that helped to open the center.

Casa Feliz has drop-in hours on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, providing services such as blood pressure monitoring, medication counseling, nutrition counseling, general health assessment and stress management.

nursing undergraduate students and six speech pathology graduate students go to Casa Feliz Tuesday and Wednesday mornings.

Students work with clients and have Tuesday's seminars on topics such as memory skills and information processing, anxiety symptoms, depression symptoms, mania and psychosis and interpersonal relationships.

"It is a great opportunity to work with other disciplines," said Jean Novak, professor of Communication Disorders and Sciences. "Students can learn what it is like in the real world."

Some students started working at the various centers three years ago and received positive reactions.

"This population loves students," said Phyllis M. Connolly, nursing department professor. "Professional self-esteem is really heightened."

The centers have been a wonderful learning environment for students, Connolly said, but

SJSU lands prize winning author

By Belinda Amaya

"Larry's Party" hasn't won a Pulitzer Prize — yet.

Two years after winning the prestigious Pulitzer Prize award in 1995 for "The Stone Diaries," author Carol Shields will be speaking at SJSU.

Monday at 12:30 p.m. in the Spartan Memorial Chapel, Shields will discuss her life and accomplishments, followed by a 7:30 p.m. reading of "Larry's Party" in the Engineering Building Auditorium.

Alan Soldofsky, director of the Center for Literary Arts, makes it possible to get a novelist of Shields' stature to speak on campus.

"Carol Shields is one of today's most lyrical novelists, capable of rendering crucial, yet minute changes of characters' emotions," Soldofsky said.

Shields' other novels include "Small Ceremonies," "Swann," "The Orange Fish," "The Republic of Love," "Happenstance" and "The Box Garden."

Public Affairs Officer Michele McDevitt said Shields wrote an hour a day, everyday while raising five children. The finished product was her novel, "Small Ceremonies."

"Small Ceremonies" was Shields' first novel which was published in Canada on her 40th birthday. "Swann" was her first United States novel published in 1989 and won the Arthur Ellis award for best mystery. She also had a collection of stories published the same year called "Various Miracles."

Shields' novel, "The Stone Diaries" won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction, the National Book Critics Circle Award and Canada's Governor General's Award.

In her current novel, "Larry's Party," Shields takes the reader to key events in a male's life and exemplifies what it means to be a man in today's society at the turn of the century.

As well as being a Pulitzer Prize winner, Shields is also the recipient of honorary doctorates from Queen's University and the Universities of Winnipeg, Ottawa, British Columbia and Hanover, her alma mater.

Shields also currently serves as the Chancellor of the University of Winnipeg.

'M*A*S*H' star speaks at SJSU

By Anthony Perez
Staff Writer

David Ogden Stiers, well-known for his role as Charles Winchester III on the "M*A*S*H" television show and voices in Disney movies, spoke in front of a San Jose State University drama class Thursday afternoon.

Stiers steered away from talking about his accomplishments in television and film that the average person would recognize him from and instead focused on the direction of American theater arts and conducting.

Throughout Stiers' career, he has jumped around from live theater acting to conducting orchestras to acting in television and feature films.

"I had no idea what to expect," said drama major Mary Lisa Holder. "But when I got there I knew I was really going to enjoy this."

Lately Stiers has done several roles in the Disney full-length animations "Pocahontas," "Beauty and the Beast" and "Hunchback of Notre Dame." He has also just completed a television pilot which may turn into a Fox Network mid-season replacement called "Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place."

On the big screen, Stiers has been a character actor in the movies "Meet Wally Sparks" and "Iron Will."

"I have to work for a living," Stiers said. "Hollywood pays for what it can afford and theater pays for what it can afford."

Drama Professor Bob

Jenkins brought Stiers in to talk exclusively with his directing class which partly filled the Hal Todd Theater in Hugh Gillis Hall. The 25 students in the directing class were the only people allowed into the small theater.

The question-and-answer period following Stiers' monologue was cut short because his car was parked in a one-hour zone and was in danger of being ticketed. With a traffic officer circling the block, Stiers rushed out of the theater.

Jenkins said he would like to have Stiers back to talk to one of his other classes but said the actor would not speak to a larger group of students.

Kamau makes silent impact

By Shayda Fathipour
Staff Writer

She's known as the quietest player on the team, but when Tanya Kamau is on the volleyball court she makes noise.

Kamau is a newcomer who has made an impact this season on the 6-5 San Jose State University volleyball team.

"She's too quiet to get everyone excited," said SJSU volleyball coach Craig Choate, "but everyone loves her."

Originally from Hilo, Hawaii, Kamau was recruited from South Mountain Community College in Arizona with her teammate Sina Tautolo, who is also from Hawaii (Honolulu).

"It was a so-called package deal in getting us together," Kamau said.

Choate was in Arizona for a high school game when he heard there was a junior college tournament going on that same weekend and jumped at the chance to see it.

Since coming to SJSU, Kamau said the difference between community college competition and university is that Division I is a higher caliber of competitiveness. Quickness and ball control is stronger and the setup positions are different than community college.

"I've improved here. I feel like the team pushes me more."

— Tanya Kamau,
SJSU outside hitter

The 20-year-old, 5-foot-9, junior never thought that she would play on the right side of the court as an outside hitter. In the past, Kamau had done her spiking from the left side, but her teammates have made the transition smooth for her.

"I've improved here," Kamau said. "I feel like the team pushes me more."

Kamau was recently selected as an all-tournament player at the University of San Francisco—Saint Mary's tournament. Her .426 hitting percentage against teams during the tournament earned her the title along with five other players.

Kamau finished the tourney with 28 kills and 22 digs.

"If someone did that all year she'd be the college player of the year," Choate said. "Statistically she's the team's best passer and athletically she's brought blocking to the right side of the net. She is an extremely good player."

Tautolo said she's seen Kamau's skills improve since they have been at SJSU.

Kamau got started in volleyball back in the sixth grade when a friend asked her to go to practice with her. The coach asked her to stay and play for the team. She only played recreationally until high school. She said her sport was track and field in high school. She was supposed to be running instead of playing volleyball, but plans changed after graduation.

"I was recruited by the junior college when I was in high school," she said, "but I didn't take high school volleyball seriously. I wish I had."

Kamau and her 12 teammates at SJSU get along well on the court as well as off. They spend time together just hanging out and watching movies.

"I love my teammates," she said. "We're the closest the team has been in years."

As she returned to Hawaii for the first time as a Spartan, Kamau tallied eight digs, three blocks, a service ace and had a .333 hitting percentage in SJSU's three-set loss to the Rainbow Wahine.

Throughout the season, Kamau has racked up 118 kills and 103 digs, 28 blocks and 11 service aces.

She has played in every game this season, but she also has other things on her agenda.

Besides playing for the team, Kamau is studying human performance to become a physical education teacher. She said she wants to go back to Hawaii after graduation and teach high school students.

"I don't want to see students fail out of (physical education) because it's the easiest class," she said.

Shay O'Reilly/Spartan Daily

Tanya Kamau is averaging over three kills per game during her first season as an outside hitter on the SJSU volleyball team. The Spartans will host SMU at 7 p.m. Friday and TCU at 7 p.m. Saturday. Both matches will be at the Event Center.

Ex-Spartan now Oregon State's 'big brown Beaver'

By Dustin Shekell
Senior Staff Writer

When Matt Gartung tore a knee ligament in high school, SJSU was the only Division I school interested in him.

After attending SJSU for a semester, Gartung realized he wasn't interested in San Jose. When the Spartans visit Oregon State Saturday, they will have to deal with the 6-foot-6, 305 pound Gartung, on the opposing team. He is now the Beavers' starting left offensive tackle.

Gartung's days in San Jose were numbered from the beginning. He dislocated his shoulder while preparing himself for his first spring practice in 1995. With the prospect of missing a season and playing away from his home in Strathmore, Calif., Gartung decided to relocate.

"I knew I wouldn't be able to play once I got to San Jose," Gartung said. "I just wasn't ready to go to a big university yet."

Gartung never wore the Spartans' uniform, deciding instead to go back where he came from before spring practice began.

"I was kind of uncomfortable being that far away from home," he said. College of the Sequoias in Visalia was the next stop for Gartung. This allowed him to live at home while simultaneously earning two all-league selections for his play at right tackle.

The accolades caught the eye of the new coaching staff at Oregon State.

"We're very fortunate and pleased to have him here," Beaver head coach Mike Riley said. "He's one of our better offensive linemen."

The Beavers (1-2) have struggled in recent years and turned to Riley to convert their offense into one which makes the team more competitive and enticing to elite recruits. When he met the incoming Beavers' regime, he was impressed by what he saw.

"I really liked the coaching staff," Gartung said. "It seems like there's more optimism on this team because we know we're going to win some games."

Gartung wasn't around to suffer with the Oregon State football program thus far in the 1990's. The Pac-10 has been feasting on barbecued Beaver shish kabobs for quite some time. The beleaguered Beavers have won two or fewer games five of the last seven years.

The new system seems to be catching on in Corvallis, though. The team's only two losses this season were three-point squeakers at the hands of two top-25 teams.

"He's added a lot to our offensive line," Riley said. Even after transferring to Oregon State, he is still not far from his parents. Matt's father, Mark, played for the Beavers' football team in the 1960's. Mark Gartung is happy his son has continued the family tradition at Oregon State, he only wishes the Beavers would win some games, Matt said.

Carpool: Solutions

don't have enough parking facilities on campus to accommodate every student. We have to help them in some other way."

One of the solutions that the AS has come up with in the past, De Alba said, is the AS Transportation Alternative Program (TAP), which allows students to use their pink enrollment cards to ride Valley Transportation Authority buses or light rail to school. Approximately 12 percent of students use the program.

Another agency that promotes alternative transportation on campus, ALTRANS, provides students with free trip planning information, including carpool matches, to assist them in their commute.

Radio, television and film

major Eric Mikel is one of San Jose State University's alternative commuters.

"Traffic and parking is such a hassle that it's a lot more convenient for me just to ride my bike to school," Mikel said. "There are bike lockers around campus, anyway, so why should I give myself a hard time looking for a parking space when I can just take my bike?"

He said it is about time that students start to look for alternative ways to commute to school.

"I think RIDES' raffle promotion is a good idea to encourage people to think about their commute habits," Mikel said.

Mikel said he plans on entering his pledge for the RIDES raffle.

Students may enter the raffle by calling ALTRANS at 924-RIDE.

exercise is going out in the community and obtaining donations."

Local businesses played a role in the day's events.

"Burger King donated 30 kids meals, Star Force and Zanotto's each donated 10 gift certificates and Shirtique gave us 10 shirts and a $45 jersey," said Chan, who donned a pink ladies jacket similar to the ones worn in "Grease," during the event.

Dowling said his students surpassed expectations of 75 participants and their efforts were greater than students in the past. He has taught the class since 1984.

"Over time these events are becoming more colorful and prizes are much better," Dowling said. "Our purpose is to allow kids a breather from classes, promote the department and show the students on campus something unique that they won't see everyday."

Joshua Calderon, a 24-year-old Aviation Maintenance major who won the last shirt said, "It was a good break from the monotony of school. More departments should do it. The prizes were great. I would have been happy with a lollipop."

A rest period was welcomed by students studying for midterms.

"We wanted to provide a pleasant experience for students between classes," said Zoe Pope a 23-year-old junior who helped organize the event. "It's a break with a 'Grease live' theme. We wanted people to retreat to their childhood memories."

"The music was a great touch," Calderon said. "It reminds me of the actual movie when John Travolta and Olivia Newton John drive away at the end of the fair."

According to Chan, the toughest event was tossing a ping-pong ball into the cardboard car. But Calderon did not agree.

"The hula-hoop was the toughest," Calderon said. "I haven't done the Elvis pelvis gyration in a while."

Violent offenders out of jail

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona's juvenile prison system released 13 violent offenders up to four months before their sentences were up because of "mismanagement, carelessness or incompetence," according to a grand jury report made public Thursday.

Two of the 13 were accused of other crimes after their premature release, one for assault and another for vehicle theft, the report said. The boys had a combined 123 previous referrals to juvenile court and were being held for crimes including assault, intimidation, vehicle theft and weapons and drug possession.

Although seven of the boys were released less than a week early, "We, the Grand Jury, find that the improper release of juveniles even a few days early is unacceptable," the report said.

"The citizens of Arizona, especially victims of crime, must be able to rely on the fact that dangerous and repetitive juvenile offenders will not be released back on the street until they serve the sentence ordered by the court absent extraordinary circumstances," the report continued.

The early releases were blamed on paperwork errors, prison overcrowding and an "unorthodox, unprecedented method" of calculating sentences, the report said.

The 16-member grand jury heard testimony from 17 people and reviewed thousands of pages of documents between January and April. The panel did not find enough evidence to issue criminal indictments, but "the investigation revealed very disturbing conduct and circumstances which we believe have put the safety of the public at risk," the report said.

Gov. Jane Hull asked Thursday for a face-to-face meeting with Juvenile Corrections Director Eugene

Moore to discuss the grand jury report, spokeswoman Francie Noyes said.

Mrs. Hull had paved the way for the report's release Tuesday by dropping a legal challenge to a court order making it public. Former Gov. Fife Symington, whose administration also comes under fire in the report, had backed the fight to keep the document secret.

"Gov. Hull has a zero tolerance policy for releasing offenders early," Noyes said. "She does not want one inmate, either juvenile or adult, released before they've completed the sentence ordered by the court."

Moore, who had his department hire a private lawyer to fight the report's release, scheduled a news conference Thursday afternoon to discuss the grand jury's findings.

The report also takes Moore and his department to task for what the grand jury calls laps-

Library: Issues addressed

One of the sites being considered for the new facility is the corner of San Fernando and Fourth streets, where Wahlquist Library and Hugh Gillis Hall are currently located.

If the site is approved, it would mean that students would have access to a new six-story, 500,000 square foot library right on campus which could hold the university's current collection of more than 1.5 million books and still have enough space to add books for another 25 years.

In addition, the decision would mean the end of the departments located in Hugh Gillis Hall, as well the lower-division general education courses which use classrooms in the building, the communications lab, and KSJS radio station would be displaced for an undetermined length of time. The meeting will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. in the city council chambers.

Violence: SAVE aids families

one-third of all teenagers will experience at least one episode of domestic violence.

In addition, Next Door's Shawne Smith said, three to four million women nationally have been battered in the past year. Currently, there are three organizations specifically geared against domestic violence in Alameda County and at least four in Santa Clara County, SAVE Director Rodney Clark said.

"We're trying to help these women become self-sufficient and get back together in their family units, not dangerous units," Anderman said, "but recreate the bonds between mother and child," Anderman said.

Sunday's event is one of two such fund-raisers for the familial organization. In spring, SAVE will hold a Chocolate Mardi Gras. Several SJSU students volunteered in a similar SAVE event last year, Anderman said.

SAVE operates a 24-hour anonymous help line at (510) 794-6055. Next Door runs a similar counseling service at (408) 279-7550, according to SJSU's Women's Center.
