Description

NDNP_QR is an application for National Digital Newspaper Program (NDNP) data Quality Review. It began as a loose collection of AutoHotkey scripts used by the Digital Newspaper Unit staff at the University of North Texas and gradually developed into a suite of utilities that facilitate fast and efficient review of images and metadata. NDNP_QR is intended as a complement to the Library of Congress' Digital Viewer and Validator (DVV) software.

Deriving its name from a long departed race whose castles, though in a sad state of decay, still stand within a few hundred yards of its city limits, it will ever remain as a monument to that race. Who were they, this departed race? History can tell but little of them. Discovered at the time Cortez and his followers made their first trip of exploration from Mexico, they soon vanished from the face of the earth. Historians seem to think that they were destroyed by a stronger race while the old Indian legend, handed down from generation to generation, says that they were visited by a plague, that those in the huts at the time of this plague shut up all entrances to these old castles and were there destroyed, while those who were on the outside were advised by their Gods to jump into the river and were then turned into fishes. However as that may be, the Indians of this day and generation will not eat a fish out of the Las Animas river,
