Introduction

The Georgia lottery has provided nearly $1.2 billion to Georgia's public schools, colleges, universities and other educational institutions. It has significantly increased educational opportunities for the state's students. In the first year of the Georgia lottery, more than $242 million was appropriated to educational programs. The following year, FY95, saw greater benefits to education with nearly twice the previous year's total going toward educational programs ($475 million). In FY96, the amount ($476 million) appropriated to these programs only slightly exceeded the previous year's total. After a large increase from the first year to the second year, lottery revenue seems to be stabilizing.

The Georgia General Assembly and the Governor budget lottery receipts twice for each fiscal year. The first budget is developed during the general appropriations process in March, prior to the beginning of the fiscal year. If additional revenues become available during the fiscal year, they are appropriated in the amended budget, or supplemental budget. Figure 1 shows lottery appropriations for the past three fiscal years. For each year, the total of the first appropriation and the supplemental appropriation equals the total lottery receipts appropriated.

The smaller amount appropriated in the FY96 supplemental budget indicates better forecasting of both lottery revenue and lottery-funded project budgets. That is, as lottery revenue becomes more stable, it becomes easier to anticipate. In their third year, lottery-funded projects, such as the HOPE scholarship programs and the pre-kindergarten program, have costs that are easier to predict.

Lottery Appropriations by Program

By law, the Georgia lottery receipts must be used to enhance, not supplant, state funding for education. Section 50-27-3 of the Georgia code specifies that lottery receipts are to be used for four purposes: (1) tuition grants and scholarships, (2) construction of educational facilities, (3) technology for educational facilities, and (4) pre-kindergarten for four-year-olds. Table 1 shows how lottery appropriations were distributed to each of the four categories.

Table 1. Lottery Appropriations by Program

FUNDING CLASS	FY94 Appropriation $35,247,010	FY94 Supplemental Appropriation	FY95 Appropriation	FY95 Supplemental Appropriation	FY96 Appropriation $120,281,000	FY96 Supplemental Appropriation

TOTAL	$125,000,000	$117,017,000	$249,973,298	$225,257,839	$413,356,569	$62,726,172

Sometimes funds that were appropriated during the general appropriations process are redistributed to other categories during the supplemental appropriations process. For example, funds were subtracted from the HOPE program and the pre-kindergarten program in the FY95 supplemental budget and redistributed to other programs. This occurs when all of the appropriated funds are not required for the program.

Appropriations over the three years of lottery funding have totaled $1,193,330,878. This includes $287,141,123 for scholarships, $296,941,245 for the pre-kindergarten program, $375,304,320 for technology and $233,944,190 for construction.

Lottery Appropriations by Program by Year

Funding priorities have changed considerably from year to year. Figure 2 shows how funding has risen or fallen from year to year for each program. In the first year of the lottery, FY94, most of the funding went toward technology purchases and the least amount of funding went toward construction. The next year, FY95, technology expenditures remained steady, whereas the other three programs experienced considerable increases in funding. Construction expenditures in FY95 were nearly 29 times more than they were in FY94. In FY96, the Pre-Kindergarten and HOPE programs expanded their scopes and consequently, expenditures for these programs increased considerably. Technology and construction expenditures decreased from the previous year. Construction expenditures though remained higher than FY94 expenditures for this program. Technology expenditures were at their lowest point in FY96.

In fiscal years 1994 and 1995 technology was the largest category for lottery spending, allowing a large infusion of technology into Georgia's schools (see Council report, Two Miles Down a Ten Miles Road: Instructional Technology and the Impact of Lottery Funding in Georgia, 1996). However, in FY96 the least amount of money was spent on technology. In FY96, Georgia's four-year olds were the biggest winners as the pre-kindergarten program was the largest category for lottery spending. This program expanded to provide services for all four-year-olds whose parents choose to enroll them.

Table 2. Lottery Appropriations for Fiscal Years 1994-1996 by Program

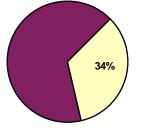

FUNDING CLASS	FY94	FY95	FY96	TOTAL

TOTAL	$242,017,000	$475,231,137	$476,082,741	$1,193,330,878

Table 2 shows the total appropriations by program for each fiscal year. In the three years of lottery funding, technology purchases ($375 million) have been the largest expenditure. The pre-kindergarten program has a three-year price tag of nearly $297 million, making it the program with the second largest expenditure. Scholarships follow closely behind, with $287 million in expenditures over the past three years. The program with the lowest, though still substantial, expenditure is construction.

The next four sections of the report will describe lottery expenditures for the four lottery program areas:

- HOPE and Other Scholarship Programs
 The Pre-Kindergarten Program
 Technology Programs
 Construction.

The Helping Outstanding Pupils Educationally (HOPE) Scholarship Program

The Helping Outstanding Pupils Educationally (HOPE) Scholarship Program provides financial assistance to Georgia students who meet eligibility requirements. Eligible students must be enrolled in a degree, diploma, or certificate program at a Georgia public or private college, university, or technical institute. The HOPE scholarship program has four primary components:

- 1. The Technical Institution Component. It provides every Georgian with the opportunity to work toward a diploma at any public technical institution in Georgia tuition-free.
- 2. The Public College Scholarship Component. It provides every Georgia high school student who graduates in 1993 or later with a "B" average the opportunity to attend a Georgia public college or university tuition-free.
- 3. The Private College Tuition Equalization Grant Component. Georgia high school graduates who attend a Georgia private college or university may receive $1,500 per year toward their education costs.
- 4. The GED Component. Georgia residents who earn an equivalency diploma receive a $500 GED voucher that can be applied to the costs of post-secondary education.

The HOPE scholarship program attempts to make post-secondary education affordable for every Georgia high school student. "[It] is designed to increase higher education participation and completion rates for Georgia students" (State of Georgia Budget Report 1996, 26). (For more information on the impact of HOPE on public college students, see the Council's report, Evaluation of the HOPE Scholarship Program, 1996.)

Tables 3-6 respectively give greater detail about the technical institution component, the public college scholarship component, the private college tuition equalization component, and the GED component. Each of these components has specific eligibility requirements and other guidelines, which are described in the following tables. In addition, the tables show how each of the components has changed from year to year.

A Georgia resident who is accepted into a diploma program at any public technical institute may receive financial assistance regardless of his or her grade point average. The technical institution component of HOPE expanded in FY95 to cover mandatory fees in addition to tuition costs. In the same year students were also given a $100 voucher to defray the cost of books and other necessary supplies. No further changes have been made or are anticipated for FY97.

Georgia high school students who graduate in 1992 or later with a "B" average and enter a degree program at a public technical institute may attend tuition-free. HOPE will pay for mandatory fees and provide a book allowance to these students.

Table 4. HOPE: The Public College Scholarship Component

The public college scholarship component of the HOPE program has expanded dramatically over the last three years. Students who enter college with a HOPE scholarship and maintain a "B" average will continue receiving the HOPE scholarship until graduation. In FY94 school year HOPE covered only tuition costs. Now, the scholarship covers tuition and mandatory fees at all public colleges and universities. HOPE scholarship recipients also receive a $100 book allowance. In FY96, two significant changes occurred: (1) family income restrictions for HOPE eligibility were removed and (2) students who are already in public college or are returning to public college became eligible for the HOPE scholarship. No changes in this component are anticipated for FY97.

Table 5. H	OPE: The	Private Colleg	ge Tuition Ec	qualization	Component

The private college tuition equalization grant component of HOPE supplements the Georgia Tuition Equalization Grant of $1,000, which is received by all Georgia residents attending a private college. FY97 marks the first year that students who receive the HOPE scholarship for private college must meet the same requirements as the HOPE recipients in public colleges. All students must earn a 3.0 GPA in high school. To continue to receive the award, they must earn a 3.0 GPA in college. Students who received the HOPE scholarship before the new rules may be eligible for continued financial assistance from HOPE. These students must have attended private college for at least one school term between summer 1995 and summer 1996. They are eligible for financial assistance from HOPE through spring 1999.

Although the number of students who participated in this component has increased each year, this number is expected to decrease for FY97. With stiffer eligibility requirements, the number of students who are eligible for this component will decrease.

Eligibility	Any Georgia resident who passes the GED

Award	$500 voucher	$500 voucher	$500 voucher	$500 voucher

Georgia residents who pass the GED examination receive a $500 voucher that may be used for education-related purposes. These purposes include tuition, books, supplies and other expenses related to the furtherance of the resident's post-secondary education.

Other HOPE Programs

Four programs have been added to the HOPE scholarship since its inception. These programs are more narrowly focused than the HOPE scholarship components detailed above. They include:

The HOPE Teacher Scholarship Program. Teachers who are obtaining advanced degrees in teaching areas with a shortage of prospective teachers are eligible for this program. The program provides loans that are forgiven after four years of teaching in Georgia public schools. The cost for providing HOPE scholarships to 1,527 teachers in FY96 was $10 million.

The HOPE Promise Teacher Scholarship Program. College juniors who desire to become teachers and have a 3.6 or higher GPA are eligible for this program. The program provides annual loans of $3,000 that are forgiven after four years of teaching in Georgia public schools. It aims to attract high achievers into the teaching profession. The total cost of this program in FY96 was $3 million.

Georgia Military College Scholarship Program. Sixty Georgia Military College students received this military scholarship in FY96. Eligible students received a low interest loan, which is forgivable with military service. The total appropriations in FY96 for this program was $336,000.

Survivors of Deceased Public Safety Officers Scholarship Program. This program provides full scholarships to children whose parent was killed or disabled in the line of duty. Total appropriations in FY96 was $100,000.

HOPE Lottery Expenditures

The HOPE scholarship program provides more scholarships to more students than ever before. As the scope has broadened and programs were added, HOPE expenditures have increased dramatically. When the program begin in 1993, it awarded nearly $47 million in grants and scholarships. In FY96, it awarded $162 million, a dramatic three-fold increase.

Figure 3 shows how the money is distributed among HOPE's four components. In all three years, the public college scholarship component has been the component with the largest expenditure. The private college tuition equalization component has consistently been the second largest expenditure of the HOPE program. The technical institution component follows closely behind the private college component, while the GED component is the component with the smallest expenditure.

While each year all four components have grown, two of the components-- the public college scholarship and the private college grant components--have experienced a more than six-fold increase in expenditures. The total in FY96 for the technical institution component is five times what the total was in the program's first year. The GED component has not grown as quickly as the other components, though still increased from $881,467 in FY94 to more than $2.2 million in FY96.

Lottery expenditures have increased in part because more students are participating in the program. Figure 4 illustrates the increase in the number of students from fiscal year 1993 through FY96. More students are benefiting from the HOPE program than ever before. Nearly 130,000 students received a HOPE grant or scholarship in FY96, up from 40,555 students in the FY94.

The component with the largest increase in expenditures from FY94 to FY96, the public college scholarship component, also had the greatest increase in the number of recipients. Four times as many students in public colleges received the HOPE scholarship in FY96 as in FY94. Nearly three times as many students received a grant to attend a public technical institute in FY96 as in FY94. The number of GED voucher recipients increased almost as much as the number of technical institute grant recipients. The private college grant component experienced the smallest increase in the number of recipients--with almost twice as many of Georgia's private college students receiving a HOPE grant in FY96 as in the program's first year.

Table 7 and Table 8 show respectively the amount of HOPE revenues for each technical institute and the number of HOPE recipients at each technical institute.

Post-Secondary Options Program

The Post-Secondary Options (PSO) Program, which is not a HOPE scholarship program, allows high school students to take courses at colleges, universities and technical institutes and earn college or technical institute credit while fulfilling high school graduation requirements. The lottery-funded program pays tuition at the college, university or technical institute for high school students participating in the program. In the past years the program has only paid for tuition at public post-secondary institutions. However, beginning in FY96 students who live beyond a reasonable commuting distance from public colleges may participate in the program at private colleges.

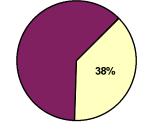

Participating students must meet the joint enrollment requirements of their local school system and those of the post-secondary institution. In some cases the PSO program also pays the costs for transportation to and from the college or technical school.

Pre-Kindergarten for Four-Year Olds

Pre-K Programs as a Percentage of the FY96 Lottery Budget

Established in 1993, the Georgia Pre-Kindergarten Program provides educational experiences for Georgia's four-year-olds and prepares them for kindergarten. The program is open to all four-year-olds who want to participate. Georgia's program serves a higher proportion of four-year-old children than any other similar program serves in other states. (For more information on the program's impact, see the Council's report, Quality and Effectiveness of Pre-Kindergarten Programs in Georgia: Parental Perspectives, 1996.)

The statewide program has grown tremendously in its three years of operation--from fewer than 9,000 children in FY94 to more than 40,000 in FY96. The program's focus has expanded from "at-risk" four-year-olds to all four-year-olds in Georgia. Consequently, expenditures for the program have risen over the last three years. Figure 5-6 show how the program has grown in both annual expenditures and the number of children served.

Lottery Expenditure Report

In the third year of operation, the program has the lowest per child expenditure. This probably reflects economy of scale--the program serves more children than ever. Figure 7 shows how the cost per child has changed from year to year.

Pre-kindergarten programs are located in many different settings. They are in schools, YMCAs, child care centers, churches, and many other organizations. School systems, public not-for-profit agencies, private not-for-profit agencies, and private for-profit agencies are eligible for funding.

Tables 18-20 show the amount of money awarded to each participating agency in FY96. Table 18 lists pre-kindergarten programs in private, for-profit agencies. Table 19 lists Pre-K programs in public or private, not-for-profits agencies. Table 20 lists Pre-K programs in local school systems. Some public agencies also received special needs capital outlay funds, which is also shown in Tables 19 and 20. Additional moneys were spent for administration, training, and other expenses and are not included in these tables.

Technology Programs

Technology Programs as a Percentage of the FY96 Lottery Budget

The Georgia lottery has allowed schools, colleges, universities and other educational institutions to purchase millions of dollars worth of technological equipment. In the first two years of the lottery, the largest portion of lottery receipts went toward technological purchases. This trend reversed in the following year, FY96, when the smallest portion went toward technological purchases. As enrollments in the HOPE and Pre-K programs have grown, and lottery funds have stabilized, the funding for technology programs has been reduced.

Technology funds have gone to four agencies: the Professional Standards Commission, the Department of Technical and Adult Education (DTAE), the Board of Regents and the Department of Education (DOE). The figure below shows how much money was awarded to each agency by fiscal year (see Figure 8).

For the first two years of lottery funding, the Department of Education received the largest portion of technology dollars. However, in FY96 the largest portion of technology dollars went to the Board of Regents. In FY96 all of these agencies saw a drop in lottery funding from their FY95 budgets. The Professional Standards Commission, which received lottery funds to strengthen technology training in colleges of education, was funded only in FY95.

With a one-time allocation of only $2 million has failed to bring colleges of education at the state's universities and colleges into the technology age. Based on finding from their recent report on technology in schools, the Council recommended that new teachers need more and better instruction on using technology in the classroom.

[T]eacher preparation programs need to be retooled to include modeling of technology use by instructors. In addition, programs should provide instruction on integrating technology in to the curriculum and student teachers should be assigned to supervising teachers who are already users of technology. They should require at least one course on instructional technology and multimedia applications in the classroom (Council for School Performance 1996, 60).

Many teachers and administrators did not feel that colleges of education were adequately preparing teachers to use technology in the classroom.

Lottery dollars for technology have continued to be allocated to the Department of Education, the Board of Regents, and the Department of Technical and Adult Education. The following discusses those agencies' technology programs.

Department of Education Technology Programs

The Department of Education saw a large decrease in its level of funding for technology. In the first year of lottery funding, DOE received approximately $109 million for technological equipment. The following year, FY95, the amount was reduced to $93 million. In FY96, DOE received less than $10 million for technological equipment, making the total appropriation one-tenth of the FY94 amount. This large decrease corroborates recent findings from the Council's report on instructional technology in schools. School administrators, teachers, and media specialists' eagerness to use technology was offset only by the fear that funding would diminish (Council for School Performance, Two Miles Down a Ten Mile Road, 1996). Their fears seem to be a reflection of the decreasing budget.

The Department of Education received technology funding in FY96 for various programs. Table 21 shows how much money was appropriated to each program.

Each of the 54 regional libraries in Georgia's public library system received $40,000 to purchase computers and other equipment. The total appropriation for this purpose was $2,160,000.

The Next Generations Schools Project encourages educational innovation from local school systems. Selected school systems receive financial assistance from the state to implement new educational strategies. These one-year grants to school systems are used exclusively as "change" money. This project is only partially funded with lottery dollars. Additional dollars come from general funds. These grants must also be matched with either cash or in-kind contributions from private agencies and local school systems.

In the first two years of the lottery, this project received $1.5 million in lottery funding. In FY96, half a million lottery dollars went toward the project. Table 23 shows how the money was distributed among school systems.

Alternative schools provide instruction and social services for chronically disruptive students who do not function well in a traditional classroom setting. In FY95, $8.5 million in lottery funds allowed the purchase of instructional technology for these alternative schools. The next year an additional $5 million was used to purchase technological equipment for new and existing alternative schools. Table 24 shows how this money was distributed among school systems.

As new technology enters schools, teachers, administrators and principals need training in the use of new technologies in teaching. Nine regional Technology Training Centers provide this training. In the first year of lottery funding, lottery funds ($1.2 million) were used to develop these centers, located at colleges, universities, and Regional Education Services Agencies (RESAs). The next year $900,000 in lottery funds for equipment to improve the centers and additional money from general funds for operating costs. Table 25 details how lottery funds were distributed among the centers in FY96.

Board of Regents Technology

The Board of Regents has received lottery funding for many technology programs over the past three years. The majority of the funding has been to the Regents Trust Fund. The Board of Regents established the fund for purchasing equipment that is too expensive to be purchased from a single year's budget. Table 27 shows Board of Regents's projects funded through the lottery technology funds.

Department of Technical and Adult Education Technology

In the three years of lottery funding, the Department of Technical and Adult Education has received nearly $45.8 million in lottery funds for technology. The amount of money for this purpose has decreased each year, from a high of nearly $23 million in FY94 to less than $8 million in FY96. Most of those funds have been used to develop computer labs at technical institutes. However in FY96 no lottery money was appropriated for this purpose.

In FY96 the majority of lottery technology funds was spent on additional equipment for facilities currently under construction at technical institutes. Table 32 shows how this money was distributed by institution.

Other Vocational Equipment

The Department of Technical and Adult Education also spent $160,000 on equipment for paramedic studies, developmental studies and distance learning for Southeastern Technical Institute's new facility in Glennville. Another $322,000 went toward the purchase of additional equipment for the Automated Manufacturing Technology program at Swainsboro Technical Institute.

Adult Literacy Equipment

The Department of Technical and Adult Education was appropriated $1,000,000 in FY96 lottery proceeds to purchase adult literacy equipment. These funds were used to purchase equipment, including computers, software and satellite downlinks, to aid teachers in literacy instruction.

Construction Programs

Construction Programs as a Percentage of the FY96 Lottery Budget

Construction projects have been funded at various levels over the past three years of lottery funding. As shown in Figure 9, construction projects were funded modestly in the first fiscal year. The next year, FY95, the amount of lottery funding for construction projects jumped to more than $157 million. FY96 saw a decrease in lottery-funded construction projects--when $71 million was spent on construction projects.

Lottery funding for construction projects is distributed among three different state agencies, the Board of Regents, the Department of Technical and Adult Education (DTAE), and the Department of Education (DOE). In two of the three years of lottery funding, the Department of Technical and Adult Education received the majority of funding for construction projects. In FY95, the Board of Regents received the most lottery funding for construction projects. Figure 10 shows lottery-funded construction expenditures by agency for each year.

Board of Regents Construction Expenditures

The Board of Regents has had seemingly erratic levels of funding over the three years of lottery funding. However, most of the money appropriated to the Board of Regents in FY95 went toward agencies attached to the Regents for administrative purposes. This pass-through money went toward two projects: a production facility for the Georgia Public Telecommunications Commission and a building for the Georgia Center for Advanced Telecommunications Technology (GCATT). In FY96, the majority of lottery construction funds went to the Georgia Research Alliance.

Table 33 shows the amount of funding for Board of Regents' construction projects.

Department of Technical and Adult Education Construction Expenditures

In an effort to reach more students, the Department of Technical and Adult Education has constructed satellite centers throughout Georgia. Each of these centers are affiliated with and managed by an existing technical institute. They provide technical instruction in underserved parts of the state. In all three years of lottery funding, the planning and construction of these centers was the largest expenditure of DTAE lottery money for construction projects. Renovations at technical institutes was the only other lottery-funded construction project ($7,000,000 in FY95).

In keeping with this trend, the planning and construction of satellite centers was also the largest expenditure of DTAE lottery money for construction projects in FY96. In fact, funding for satellite centers took up 98% of DTAE's lottery construction budget in FY96. A total of $32,373,460 in lottery funds went toward these centers in FY96.

Table 34 shows the amount of lottery funds that have been spent on the planning satellite centers in fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Table 35 shows how much has been spent in lottery funds on constructing satellite centers for fiscal years 1995 and 1996.

- $100,000 to buy equipment for the Automated Manufacturing Technology building at Augusta Technical Institute.

Department of Education Construction Expenditures

The Department of Education received $10,000,000 in lottery construction funding in FY96. These funds went toward the construction of the Discovery Center, a science learning laboratory and exhibit center in Augusta.
