The graphic design industry is very versatile, and that is one of the things that I really like about studying it. There is opportunity on pretty much everything, graphically speaking. Animation is one of those things that called attention, and being able to create a piece while learning the tool is even more impressive and rewarding.

For this project, we had to create an animated piece that would represent the mood provided by three words, from our own imagination. This animation should last about 20 seconds, and with some audio soundtrack. “ Explosion, Surprise, Joy” were the words that set my animation. A gumball machine that lets all its gumballs fall once the machine is “activated” . As they fall, some of the gumballs will go throw some holes on the floor that will lead them to a city under the floor. The gumballs will fully stop at some point, followed by an explosion, which would look like confetti, and will illuminate the city. Basically the gumball machine is the object that provides joy to a dark city that needs surprising things.
