The AMERICAN SOCIETY of CRIMINOLOGY

PRESIDENT

Nicholas N. Kitterie
The American University Law School
Washington, D.C. 20016

The purposes and objectives of the American Society of Criminology, according to its new constitution, are:

A. To bring together in one multidisciplinary society persons actively engaged in research, teaching, and/or practice in the field of criminology;

B. To foster criminological scholarship, research, education, and training within academic institutions and within the divisions of the criminal justice system, including public and private agencies concerned with crime, justice, and corrections;

C. To encourage scholarly, scientific and practical exchange and cooperation among those engaged in criminology;

D. To serve as a forum for the dissemination of criminological knowledge.

Please direct all written inquiries on the overall operation of the meeting to:

Dear Colleagues,

I would like to extend a warm welcome to you. Every effort has been put forth to make this annual meeting of the Society rewarding for you both professionally and socially. Our Canadian hosts have been most helpful and I know they join me in extending the hand of friendship across the borders of all the lands from which you have travelled.

In a troubled world, cast adrift from old values and seeking new ethical moorings, there is great comfort in observing professionals whose most powerful weapons still are the mind and the pen. It is my sincere hope that this meeting will produce some new ideas that will have a practical impact on improving the quality of life for all of the world's people.

Themes

The central theme of the meeting is international perspectives of criminology. Therefore, the program is designed to provide a variety of views from different countries on important topics in criminology. Special attention is being paid this year to combining the world of academia with the world of criminal justice practice.

Thus, the following sub-themes are being considered by most panels:

- 1) the capability of criminology to improve the quality of life in civilized society;
- 2) how to increase the ability of the criminal justice system to respond to crime;
- 3) the contributions of criminological research to criminal justice practice; and
- 4) ideas and programs that have breakthrough potential for the future.

Wherever possible, panels and workshops include people who represent a diversity of backgrounds, various countries, and different points of view, as well as criminal justice practice, academia, and research.

Panels

Among the innovations in the organization of the conference is the operation of the panels. In consultation with the president and the executive board, I selected chairpersons and, in some cases, vice-chairpersons — but then it was their responsibility to select all of the panelists. The reason for this arrangement was to give individual initiative and ingenuity the widest possible latitude. I believe you will agree, from the evidence contained in this program, that this approach produced happy results.

Workshops

The workshops were organized along somewhat the same principles, but with differences. I selected the chairpersons and I also assigned many of the participants to the workshops, based on written expressions of interest. However, the chairpersons were given the responsibility to invite additional participants, if desired, and to set the ground rules for the discussion. These workshops will normally be limited to fifteen participants. A few have been assigned more because of special circumstances.

It was not always possible to assign people to workshops precisely according to their wishes, nor to notify everyone of their assignments. The logistics of this event demand some flexibility on the part of all of us. Please review the list of workshop assignments to locate yours. Most of the workshops are still below the 15-person maximum as this program goes to press. If you wish to reserve a place in a particular workshop, please write me and I will do my best to place you in it or in a related one. These additional workshop assignments will be listed in a supplementary program announcement at the meeting.

In the past, the workshops have proven to be some of the most effective and rewarding phases of the Society's meetings. Workshops provide the opportunity for much informal interaction among colleagues normally separated by great distances. Papers need not be presented although it is quite conceivable that some participants will want to talk from papers they have prepared. All papers prepared by participants in workshops, as in the case of panel participants, should be submitted to me, so that they may be considered for publication in the series of books that will result from the conference.

Publication and Format of Papers

Papers which have been read or published elsewhere, or modified only in secondary respects, are not eligible for presentation at the conference. While the Society seeks to encourage the widest possible dissemination of these papers, it requests that all those submitting papers allow the Society approximately three months to determine whether or not it will publish the paper in its special series — before they make other arrangements for publication.

In order to save a great deal of work at the publication stage, authors are requested to follow this procedure. Papers should be legibly typed. They should not exceed 4000 words. All matters of format, especially footnotes, should be in a state suitable for publication. Since it is probable that the resultant books will be published by Praeger, reference should be made to footnote format in previous volumes published by Praeger for the Society. Among these volumes are the following:

Donal E. J. MacNamara and Marc Riedel, Police: Perspectives, Problems, Prospects. New York, New York: Praeger Publishers, 1974.

Marc Riedel and Terence P. Thornberry, Crime and Delinquency: Dimensions of Deviance. New York, New York: Praeger Publishers, 1974.

Ronald L. Akers and Edward Sagarin, Crime Prevention and Social Control. New York, New York: Praeger Publishers, 1974.

Professional Employment Exchange

The Society has officially recognized that its members like to eat and have to pay taxes and mortgages. Accordingly, it has inaugurated a Professional Employment Exchange, which will provide consenting prospective employers and employees the opportunity to find one another at the meeting. Forms and a description of the service are found near the end of this program.

Fees

If you are not already a member of the Society, we invite you to join. Membership and conference registration fees are virtually the sole support of this vital organization. It has no endowment, no government grants, no blue chip stocks. To encourage student participation, their membership fee is half the regular cost and they are charged no meeting registration fee. Students may purchase tickets to the banquets at the meeting on an individual basis: $10 for the lunch, and $15 for the dinner. The meeting registration fee, which covers meals and all other events, for members is $30 until September 30, and $40 thereafter. There is no registration fee for spouses or children, and banquet tickets are available to them on an individual basis at student rates.

Of course, it is not necessary that you appear on the program in order to attend. The only requisite for attendance is a professional interest in criminology and crime control. We need listeners as well as speakers.

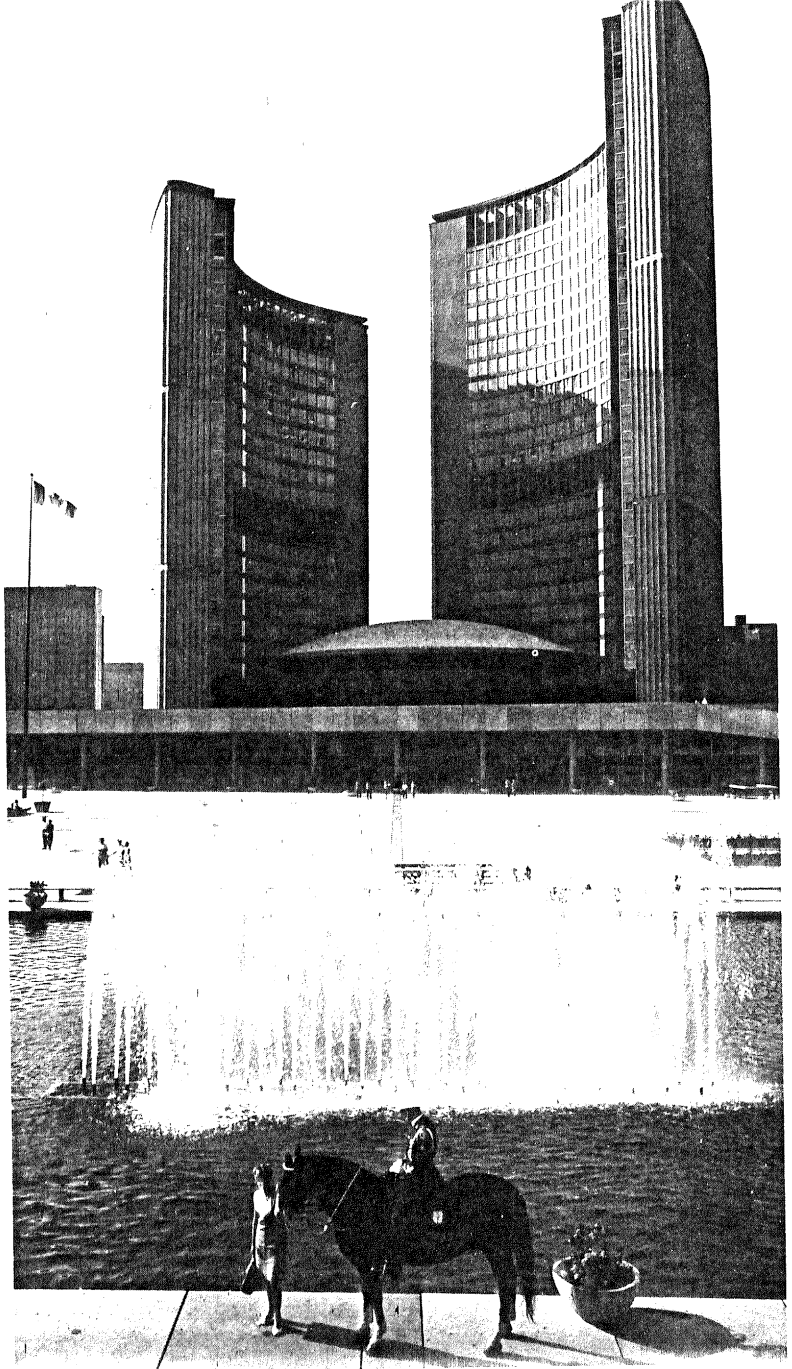

It has been a pleasure, although at times a hectic one, to have served as Program Chairman for this meeting. I know that I have learned a great deal about criminology and criminologists in the process. If only we ran the world, or at least so this experience has suggested to me, all of our countries would be less bureaucratic, more peaceful, and infinitely more exciting.

Finally, to my good friend and the Society's President, Nicholas Kittrie, goes my appreciation for the rare privilege of working with a first rate mind and an unquenchable spirit, a combination that makes no dreams impossible.

My very best wishes for a successful meeting.

Arnold S. Trebach

TORONTO'S CITY HALL, once called "one of the most controversial buildings in North America", is now a familiar landmark in Canada's second largest city. The civic center was designed by the famous Finnish architect, Viljo Rewell and was opened in 1965. It cost more than $30,000,000 to build. The Holiday Inn overlooks this scene. PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYMENT EXCHANGE

The Society has inaugurated a new service for its members: the Professional Employment Exchange. The positions involved may be in any area of criminal justice and criminology, including teaching, research, administration, and practice. A Professional Employment Exchange desk will be set up in the lobby of the conference site and will operate throughout the Annual Meeting in Toronto. Prospective employers and employees may submit job opportunity descriptions and resumes so that they may be put on file at the meeting. These materials will be made available to persons attending the meeting without charge. Persons filing materials must understand that position announcements and resumes will be public to the extent that they will be generally available to conferees. In order to facilitate informal private meetings between interested parties, all those concerned should go to the Professional Employment Exchange desk upon arrival and complete a registry form. If you wish to register with the exchange in advance, please complete the appropriate attached form and mail to:

"A long-awaited work."*

FORENSIC GEOLOGY

Earth Sciences and Criminal Investigations

by Raymond C. Murray and John C. F. Tedrow

"Describing how one may find evidence as bits of soil, rock fragments, ceramic material, plaster, cosmetics, etc. somewhere 'at the scene' of the crime, the authors outline some of the methods used in forensic geology and offer many examples from the legal record... A well-written and nicely illustrated introduction to a subject of great interest and importance."

—Library Journal

"This book is, in a word, fascinating. Specific earth science techniques are applied in a clear readable manner to real sleuthing situations."—Current Science

"Should prove to be a valuable contribution to the forensic literature."—John I. Thornton, Journal of Forensic Sciences.

This is the book—and the man—
the entire country will be talking about.
TOO DANGEROUS TO BE AT LARGE
by Ray D. Johnson

with Mona McCormick

In 1958, Ray Johnson became the first maximum security prisoner to escape from the fortress called Folsom Prison. This is the intensely personal story of his life; from the streets of San Diego to the big yard at San Quentin; from state-ordered sterilization before he reached the age of 18 to four years of solitary confinement; and, finally, to life as a colleague, lecturer, and research associate at Western Behavioral Sciences Institute. And, he has recently become an exciting television personality. It is a moving document that offers tragedy (and humor) and, above all, it is a plea for humane treatment in our prisons. $6.95
