MISSION STATEMENT

The Staten Island Foundation was established in 1997. Our mission is to improve the quality of life on Staten Island, particularly for the least advantaged, with a focus on improving education, health, community services and the arts.

Message from the Chairman | LOOKING BACK

This Biennial Report gives me a chance to take a look back at our activities over the past 18 years and also envision the Foundation's productive future. I am enormously proud of all that we have accomplished together, for, and with Staten Island.

As with all living things, organizations go through periods of growth and change as they develop from start-up to maturity. For boards, the constant essentials of good governance throughout these life-cycle changes are: providing leadership, articulating the vision for the organization, and ensuring a mission-driven focus.

For The Staten Island Foundation's board, the passing of our founding Chairman Harry P. Doherty, was especially sad. Harry, retired Chairman and CEO of SI Bank & Trust, a father of three, and father figure to thousands, died in 2008. Those of you who knew Harry, know that this life-long Staten Islander felt strongly that a bank's role was to support its home community. Under his leadership, the Bank Board established The Staten Island Foundation in late 1997, when the Staten Island Savings Bank became publicly owned. Because of this, the Foundation has been able to contribute more than $58 million to help local institutions thrive, and is one of the Island's major sources of philanthropy. Its support of hundreds of Island charities and institutions has brought the borough sustenance, prosperity and flavor.

After Harry's death, I succeeded him in the role of Chairman. It was an emotional, difficult time but we moved ahead re-affirming the vision for the organization and ensuring its lasting purpose, values and effectiveness.

Working closely with my founding board colleagues and with the support of Executive Director, Betsy Dubovsky, we instituted many changes. We brought on new board members. We refined the Foundation's goals and program areas of focus, deciding to do more to address this borough's education and health issues. We committed to an outcomes orientation and results-based approach—because as Yogi Berra put it, "If you don't know where you're going, you won't know when you get there." Over many years, we invested long term capital to build the capacity of local organizations to meet their missions, raise revenue and achieve sustainability.

With a laser mission-focus, we continued to build our own capacity as a Foundation to provide catalytic leadership and to support emerging collaborations through a collective impact approach. The centerpiece of our collective impact work is the Tackling Youth Substance Abuse initiative, which is described later in this report. TYSA brings together participants around a common agenda, sharing data, mutually reinforcing activities and continuous communication. Through TYSA, we are demonstrating both the power of alignment within this community, and Staten Island's leadership and influence well beyond this community.

Over the years as an organization and as a community, we also faced significant new challenges including 9/11, the subsequent market downturn and Hurricane Sandy. At these critical times, the Foundation's board and staff worked to step up our support, to more deeply engage a wide range of community stakeholders and to help raise and leverage support from other sources – including off-Island funders who previously had little or no experience with Staten Island.

Looking back, it all seems seamless: the will-ingness of our Founders to stay on the board and to invest in new people with the shared vision and deep mission alignment at every level of the Foundation. We came together – board, staff and community – we worked exceptionally well together, we supported each other in tough times, and we celebrated our successes together.

Like Staten Island itself, this Foundation has a strong culture. That culture extends from our founding members to our new board members, from the Foundation's excellent staff to the many members of this community, who every day are doing the toughest and most rewarding work of creating change, with and in this vibrant community.

It has been an honor to work with all of you. From a base of real strength, engagement and commitment, I know the Foundation is poised to accomplish even more in the future.

Message from the Executive Director | LOOKING AHEAD

The Staten Island Foundation has been deeply engaged with our growing, changing and everadapting community through triumph and tragedy over the past several years. We have seen the best and the worst of human behavior, and are profoundly hopeful about the capacity of the people and the institutions of Staten Island to come together and create a shared future where each one of us can become our highest and best self. For all of us, that means making connections: partnering in relationships of trust to create transformational change for our community's benefit.

It seems like yesterday that, as an early adopter of collective impact thinking, we began to partner across the borough to address a complex, life-anddeath health issue: helping our kids make healthy choices and reduce use of alcohol and drugs. There's been much to celebrate in the growth and development of the Tackling Youth Substance Abuse (TYSA) initiative of the Staten Island Partnership for Community Wellness, which is now recognized and supported at the city, state and federal levels. Imagine the sadness of a departing Steering Committee member who had never seen such an effective coalition in her 20-plus years in the substance abuse field. She truly felt she was going to "miss something amazing happening!" We're proud to be working with outstanding, dedicated professionals from multiple sectors in the TYSA effort.

Our collective impact efforts became a model for other emerging youth-focused initiatives here—such as improving educational success, improving childhood health and fitness and improving birth outcomes—just as new administrations at the city and borough level focused anew on strengthening public-private partnerships.

We are pleased to be working with the intermediary JobsFirstNYC, to help establish a Staten Island youth workforce employment partnership which meets the needs of our youth and businesses, and connects this borough with city resources for opportunity youth.

Betsy Dubovsky, Executive Director

Also exciting is our work with national thought leaders in population level change efforts such as John Kania of FSG, Inc. and Jeff Edmondson of StriveTogether. We will be looking to them as well as other partners experienced in results-based leadership, facilitation and accountability as we work relentlessly to bring the resources, frameworks and tools our community partners need to develop themselves to do the work of change.

Our community-based leadership development support continues for Community Resource Exchange's high-performing manager training, New York Cares volunteer management and for the professional development of teachers.

We are excited about the new spirit of openness and cooperation in the offices of the District Superintendent and the new Borough Office of Field Support for our schools. We have connected with the current Director of Community Schools at the Department of Education. The thinking at the city and state level about the value of community schools is the same we saw locally through the Staten Island Vision Project we supported through 2009. In fact, Curtis High School has told us they became a community school as a direct result of their participation in that project's education discussion.

Through these and other efforts, The Staten Island Foundation has patiently cultivated the capacity for collective work over many years.

The importance of the combined support and work of every member of our board and staff, each of whom is a deeply caring and well-respected member of this community, cannot be overstated. Chairman Allan Weissglass has inspired and encouraged us to catalyze big efforts for Staten Island. Philanthropy consultant Dara Major, originally brought to us by the generosity of the New York State Health Foundation, has helped us to connect with the broader philanthropic world as well as raise, distribute and account for disaster relief funds approaching $2 million, most notably $1,250,000 from American Red Cross.

Moving forward, we will have to address challenges inherent in aligning multiple collective impact efforts with each other, with critically-needed funding and with the ever-present limits of one foundation's financial resources. We look to and welcome new partnerships with our philanthropic colleagues, as we now have with the Peter and Carmen Lucia Buck Foundation on collective impact for improved birth outcomes.

The Foundation's work continues to shed light on the strengths and challenges of this borough often thought of as a remote "outer borough." Our intention and our attention is focused on combining efforts to help Staten Island thrive. From education and life-long learning to the healthy habits of mind, body and spirit, together we can create the conditions that enable all our children to be well and succeed in school and in life.

I hope you enjoy this report and the story of our many efforts to help a community succeed and the many organizations here that are successfully making our future every day.

Our cover images of the seedling emerging through the crack in the asphalt and our Goodhue Center campers putting their heads together are meant to tell us something. We need to widen the cracks in outmoded thinking, old-school leadership styles and personalities on power trips. New leadership of a different sort is emerging. We see a strong connection between empowering the growth of collective leadership and the success of the diverse, complex whole community that is Staten Island.

Finally, the shirts of two of the circle of campers send us extraordinary messages. Imagine if we heeded their calls to "Trust Me" and to "Follow Love!" Haven't these always been seeds of transformation?

I look forward to the journey together to the best future we can bring about.

MAKING CONNECTIONS | Engaging the Community

The Staten Island Foundation is the only independent private foundation exclusively focused on results for the Staten Island community. It is proud to operate from a position of long-term commitment in assisting local organizations and residents to reach their goals and realize their dreams.

ARTS EDUCATION

The Foundation has made a strong commitment to expanding access to quality arts education opportunities for Staten Island students and their families. For example, in the past two years we have made 18 grants totaling $350,000 to 13 cultural organizations and 23 schools to provide over 6,000 children with programs in theater and the performing arts, photography, dance, music, puppetry, visual arts and creative writing. Sundog Theatre's 3-D Literacy Program works with about 400 low-performing students, using theater techniques to boost literacy achievement. Their results have been remarkable: 97% of the participants tested, using Teachers College and Fountas & Pinnell assessments, increased reading levels by at least one level with most students increasing their literacy achievement by 2, 3 and 4 levels (with some by as many as 8, 9 and 10 levels)! IlluminArt Productions received a capacity building grant to train more teaching artists to meet the growing demand for their theater programs; they worked with over 400 students to develop plays that address issues such as substance abuse, bullying and date violence that were presented to almost 4,000 youth and adults.

CAPITAL PROJECTS

Over the past two years we have made a limited number of strategic investments in capital improvements that would lead to increased efficiency or effectiveness for our grantees. They include: expanded kitchen facilities for Meals on Wheels to meet the needs of Staten Island's booming senior population; an emergency canopy for an arson damaged building at Historic Richmond Town; a renovated pool for exercise and therapeutic programs for On Your Mark's clients; and installation of hardware and software for patients' digital records at the Community Health Center of Richmond. We're especially proud of our significant support to The Staten Island Museum which enabled them to secure other funding to open buildings A and B at Snug Harbor Cultural Center & Botanical Garden. These newly-opened buildings realize the vision of Elizabeth Egbert, the Museum's President and CEO, who passed away on August 30, 2014. Elizabeth embodied the spirit of collaborative leadership as she gathered and synthesized the talents and contributions of many partners to make the new facilities a reality for the community.

LEADER IN ME

With the Foundation's support, 10 local schools trained teachers and staff in Stephen Covey's "7 Habits of Highly Effective People" program for young people, The Leader in Me, to help students strengthen their leadership skills and develop habits around responsibility and accountability. Participating schools report that attendance rates and academic achievement improved, while discipline problems decreased. PS 23 reported that the number of students reading at or above grade level increased by 8% and chronic absenteeism was reduced by 4%; the number of school disciplinary incidents decreased by 30% with the number of suspensions decreased from 8 the previous year to 1 for this school year, a reduction of 88%. PS 26 saw strong growth in literacy with data from 2014 NYS ELA exam indicating that PS 26 students had the most growth out of all elementary and middle schools on Staten Island, which they believe directly correlated to the strong data analysis work they completed as part of the Leader In Me process. At PS 26, school disciplinary infractions went from 263 in the 2010-2011 school year before implementing Leader in Me to 24 infractions during the 2013-2014 school year after implementing Leader in Me. The Covey "7 Habits" training was also provided to College of Staten Island leadership, including SEEK/Strategies for Success Program staff members. Subsequently, at least 40 students in the program each year received "7 Habits" training and mentored over 300 K-12 students in Stapleton at PS 78, IS 49 and the JCC Cornerstone Program at the Gerard Carter Center.

LEADERSHIP LN WIN-WIN WAY

PASS AFTER-SCHOOL AND COLLEGE PREP

The Foundation supports a number of efforts to optimize college success among least advantaged students. One of those efforts is the Forward PASS (Preparing to Achieve and Sustain Success) after-school program at Curtis High School, where students work with "Success Coaches" to develop and implement individual plans that include personal, academic and career goals. Sessions include coach/client planning sessions, homework help, tutoring, SAT prep and parent meetings. Partner organizations that provide additional resources include Children's Aid Society, Staten Island University Hospital Teen Pregnancy Prevention Program, Global Kids, Edumakate College2Career Initiative, NY Center for Interpersonal Development, NY Cares, Citizen's Committee for New York, CUNY Service Corps Program and College of Staten Island SEEK Program. Program leaders report that nearly 200 Curtis students achieved four projected results: 89% of the participating students achieved a GPA of over 70%; 89% had a school attendance rate of over 90%; 92% articulated a post-secondary education plan and 97% acquired sufficient credits for promotion to their next grade level.

MAKING CONNECTIONS | Cultivating Leadership for an Emerging Future

As a respected and trusted community leader, The Staten Island Foundation provides grants and deeply engages with a wide range of community stakeholders to set shared goals and align efforts for significant population-level results. The Foundation is a catalyst for community-wide collective impact efforts and a champion of programs on Staten Island serving youth, families and the least advantaged.

COLLECTIVE IMPACT

Our island community has countless networks, partnerships and coalitions. In fact, the Foundation started one – an immigrant service provider network – in 2006, in response to the needs of our growing immigrant population. Several years later, we funded a community-wide visioning project which, at its conclusion, established task forces to act on the many great ideas generated. In 2011, the Foundation was wrestling with how to best help all sorts of collaborative groups move from talk to action and impact when Betsy Dubovsky read the first article on collective impact by John Kania and Mark Kramer of the consulting firm, FSG, in the Stanford Social Innovation Review. The catalytic position of the Foundation combined with a local culture that pulls together to solve problems, led us to reach out to John Kania to help us introduce this approach to Staten Island.

As an early adopter of collective impact, the Foundation works to leverage our relationships, respected position, conference space and financial resources to connect and enable extraordinary, dedicated professionals across multiple sectors, to help our youth make healthy choices.

In 2011, we convened and provided seed funding for the Tackling Youth Substance Abuse initiative of The Staten Island Partnership for Community Wellness. It has flourished and is now recognized and supported at the federal, state and city levels. Today, the Foundation is also supporting collective impact initiatives in education and employment for opportunity youth, as well as an emerging exploration in childhood wellness.

Substance Abuse

Staten Island has the highest proportion of youth who binge drink in NYC: 37% of Staten Island youth report consuming at least one drink of alcohol in the past 30 days. Staten Island also has NYC's highest proportion of youth who have ever used a prescription pain reliever without a prescription. The effects of youth substance abuse are devastating for our youth, parents, families and community. The need for action is urgent. The well-being and future of our community is at stake.

Tackling Youth Substance Abuse is a cross-sector coalition aimed at driving major improvements in youth substance abuse on Staten Island, with the ultimate goals of decreased use of alcohol and prescription drugs and youth making healthy choices overall. It has adopted a high-level strategic framework with a common agenda and blueprint for implementation. TYSA Project Director, Adrienne Abbate, leads in-depth action planning through workgroups to develop strategies and related performance measures. To date, TYSA has made significant progress in aligning and developing new resources, and in promoting changes at the marketplace, treatment and policy levels (e.g., promoted passage of I-STOP legislation to limit misuse of prescription drugs; supported a change in New York State policy to allow possession of naloxone by non-prescribers and first responders).

"This is the only collaboration I've worked with that makes a difference. It has saved lives."

"In over 30 years of working across New York, I've never seen this kind of collaboration."

"I hear hope when I'm talking to parents and grandparents on Staten Island, I don't hear despair—and that is because of TYSA."

Education

The Staten Island Foundation brought together a cross-section of leaders for a series of planning sessions to explore new ways of working together to strengthen student outcomes and opportunities. The sessions were facilitated by Jeff Edmondson of StriveTogether, a nonprofit that works with communities to create local education ecosystems that support children and youth, from cradle to career, through a nationally-recognized collective impact approach. Participants from a cross-section of Staten Island public, private and nonprofit organizations voiced their concern that young people in our communities are experiencing increased needs, even as the North Shore is attracting higher levels of development and investment; together, they noted, we must ensure this development benefits the community.

Participants took a deep dive into key concepts and methodologies that underpin collective impact and, together, committed to developing a collective impact for education project focused on the North Shore. The Foundation has provided support to the Staten Island NFP Association to serve as the initiative's backbone organization and develop a blueprint for action over the coming year.

The Staten Island Young Adult Workforce Partnership

The study Barriers to Entry found, "In New York City, despite over a decade of public policies intended to support out-of-school and out-of-work young adults...20 percent of New Yorkers between the ages of 18 and 24—in other words, 172,000 young people—have remained on the fringes of the labor market, unable to substantially participate in the city's economic life."

The Foundation is partnering with JobsFirstNYC, a nonprofit intermediary that identifies specific problems young people face in the labor market and implements innovative strategies to help them reach their full economic potential. The Foundation has supported the discovery phase of this emerging initiative, convening service providers, agencies and community leadership to develop a demand-side workforce partnership that will serve non-college bound high school graduates and high school dropouts from low-income areas of Staten Island.

CATALYTIC CONNECTIONS | Extending Our Reach

The Staten Island Foundation serves as a convenor of local community leaders exploring new ways to strengthen their organizations and work together. Since its founding, the Foundation has worked to build the capacity of its non-profit grantees – providing funds for leadership development, technical assistance and management consulting.

To better serve its grantees, The Staten Island Foundation is also in touch with and contributes to current issues and practices in the field of philanthropy. The Foundation is a member of Philanthropy New York, the Association of Small Foundations, Grantmakers in Education and Grantmakers in Health. Through the Collective Impact Forum, it is a member of a national funders' community of practice. Over the past two years, the Foundation's thought leadership has been featured by Philanthropy New York and the Stanford Social Innovation Review.

In addition, the Foundation actively cultivates and raises awareness among new supporters to the community, and serves as a link to other funding sources. For instance, post-Hurricane Sandy, the Foundation raised over $1.8 million which, combined with the Foundation's match of $518,000, delivered a total of approximately $2.3 million for the longer term recovery needs of Staten Island nonprofits. The Foundation also connected a number of off-Island funders with local organizations to leverage support available to critical nonprofits.

MAKING CONNECTIONS | Partnership Opportunities

As this vibrant community cultivates the seeds of change, we welcome the support of additional funding partners with a long-term vision – and the stamina to sustain the important research, facilitation, evaluation and backbone staffing that Staten Island's nonprofit and collective impact successes will require over many years.

"As a result of our partnership with The Staten Island Foundation, the American Red Cross—from local regional chapters to our national headquarters in Washington DC—has learned the value and the tremendous benefits that flow from partnering with a foundation with deep community networks."

—Josh Lockwood, CEO American Red Cross Greater New York Region The Staten Island Foundation makes grants to support education, arts and culture, health, community services and community recovery—as well as collective impact initiatives ranging from Tackling Youth Substance Abuse to education, employment for opportunity youth and emerging efforts childhood wellness.

What works in Staten Island is increasingly recognized and taking root across the city, state and region. As an outgrowth of our Tackling Youth Substance Abuse work, FSG was invited to train the entire staff of New York City's Center for Health Equity in collective impact approaches. At the annual Staten Island Mental Health Council community and legislative priorities breakfast in March 2015, New York City's First Lady Chirlane McCray singled out the borough's collective impact work on substance abuse as a model for New York City.

We seek to raise awareness and attract new funders to support all of these efforts. Along with federal support to the Community Health Center of Richmond, we are funding partners with the Peter and Carmen Lucia Buck Foundation in the Center's new effort to reduce infant mortality.

We are so proud of this community and grateful for the partnership of so many across this borough. Moving ahead together in close partnering relationships isn't just one way to go to make significant change happen. We believe it's the only way. We invite you to join us.

Community Recovery

"The funding provided for this critical recovery effort has touched the lives of thousands of community members. Not a week has gone by without patients and their family members thanking CHASI staff profusely for improving their health, their sustenance, their connections to the community, and in many cases, saving their lives. Thank you to The Staten Island Foundation and Red Cross, for coming to the rescue of a community in crisis, and thank you for providing me with the most rewarding experience of my entire career."

Educational Services

"As Chancellor, I continue to encourage strong partnerships between our schools and local organizations as our students benefit most when the entire community takes an interest in their education. Improving public education is the responsibility of all citizens of our City, and your organization has touched almost every public school on Staten Island. I thank you for your consistent dedication to improving the lives of all Staten Islanders, especially the children of the borough."

MAKING CONNECTIONS | Results

The following results were reported to The Foundation from July 1, 2013 – June 30, 2015 based on grants made previously. These results align with the Foundation's stated priorities that support our mission to improve the quality of life on Staten Island, especially for the least advantaged.

EDUCATION

- 1,100 teachers participated in professional development in order to improve their students' academic achievement. Almost 27,000 K-8 students, 5,600 of whom were performing below grade level, were instructed by these teachers using enhanced skills. As a result, 5,300 made significant academic progress.
- Almost 6,000 students and more than 200 teachers participated in leadership building activities at 14 schools from elementary to college levels. Participating schools reported increased academic achievement, decreased incidents requiring disciplinary action, and increased involvement in community service.
- 329 special education students participated in programs that helped them make significant academic progress in order to reach general education benchmarks...
- 455 high school and college students from low-income communities received leadership and skills training in order to enter and succeed in college.
- 370 immigrants completed ESOL instruction and improved their language skills in order to meet educational and career needs.
- 7,600 parents participated in activities that increased their involvement in their child's academic success.
- 17 previously out of school/out of work youth passed their clinical and written state tests and are licensed Certified Nursing Assistants.
- 62 teens were trained as literacy tutors.
- A collective impact effort designed to improve academic outcomes for North Shore youth was launched.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

- More than 30 community based nonprofits took on capital or capacity building efforts in order to improve results for their clients including:
 - Installation of a new kitchen, cafeteria, and independent living suite where up to 45 clients with developmental disabilities learn personal and work skills
 - Creation of a new curriculum for early learners with disabilities;
 - Increased revenue;
 - 110 volunteers engaged;
 - 2,800 more individuals participating in program activities;
 - 5 completed strategic plans;
 - 27 middle managers received leadership training;
 - Opening of senior housing for 90 low income residents.
- 78 grass-roots neighborhood quality of life projects engaged 1,100 residents
- Presentations drew 100 people to a forum on immigrant-owned local small businesses; 300 educators to a forum on the importance of developing "grit" to improve academic outcomes; and 13 teachers to a blogging seminar.
- About 500 Career & Technical Education students attended a conference to learn about internships and career opportunities with local businesses.
- 700 students and their families participated in programs focused on removing social service challenges in order to improve academic outcomes.
- 58 children who were victims of domestic violence successfully completed treatment for PTSD.
- 101 low-income immigrants were helped to achieve legal immigration status.
- 145 families facing foreclosure received mortgage modifications.
- Free tax assistance was provided for 1,500 low-income residents securing a total of $2.8 million in refunds.

ARTS & CULTURE

- 18,000 more individuals attended Staten Island arts and cultural activities.
- 13 arts and community organizations worked with 23 schools to provide arts instruction for 6,000 students in dance, theater, music, puppetry, creative writing, photography and visual arts.
- 12 cultural organizations undertook capacity building or capital improvement efforts in order to strengthen their sustainability. Results included increased revenue, particularly through grant writing and membership expansion, reduced costs, expanded programming space and marketing, increased Board engagement, and strategic planning.

HEALTH

- Within our focus on decreasing youth substance abuse, a backbone organization was strengthened and expanded to address the community crisis; over $8 million in media public service announcements, including television, radio, and Ferry ads were secured; 60 young people successfully completed treatment programs, and 88 at-risk youth participated in prevention programs. In addition 5,500 teens, parents, and others participated in trainings to learn strategies to address substance abuse.
- Over 3,000 low-income patients obtained better access to health care through digital medical records.
- 195 children participated in regular exercise.
- 2,400 individuals improved their nutrition.
- 100 at-risk individuals were screened for mental health issues and 34 received treatment.
- One agency strengthened their Board of Directors while another health organization built its capacity by increasing revenue 40%.

COMMUNITY RECOVERY

- 1,800 houses gutted and 150 rebuilt.
- A mobile health unit served 411 residents.
- 42 families were assisted with re-building and to navigate federal assistance.
- More than 1,500 lunches were provided to a Saturday respite program.
- Over 275 volunteers were engaged in recovery efforts including a neighborhood survey project to gather data for the recovery process.
- A playground for children with mental health issues was built.
- Post-Sandy, 20 organizations participated in preparedness training.
- A regional report was released that tracks giving from institutional donors as a result of Hurricane Sandy.

MISSION

The mission of The Staten Island Foundation is to improve the quality of life on Staten Island, particularly for the least advantaged, with a focus on improving education, human services and the arts.

VISION

A Staten Island that is a vibrant, diverse community of tolerant, civically engaged neighbors, where all residents—especially the least advantaged—have access to the resources necessary to maximize their potential and enhance the quality of life on the Island.

VALUES

Inherent in the Foundation's role to help improve the quality of life in Staten Island communities is the commitment to:

- Act with integrity, and serve as leaders on Staten Island
- Be an ethical, effective, accountable, approachable and transparent organization
- Adhere to and model best practices in philanthropy, and exemplify the highest ethics and business practices
- Promote equity, opportunity and civility on the Island
- Add value through intelligence, insight, and boldness, taking measured risks and leadership on certain issues
- Act with compassion and remain flexible and responsive in addressing emergencies and other critical needs

In all its operations, the Foundation is guided by a quest for excellence and a commitment to constantly striving to make a positive difference on Staten Island. For additional information on The Staten Island Foundation, please visit www.thestatenislandfoundation.org.
