The Rosenbach Lectures in Bibliography, established by the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania in 1928, honors a gift for that purpose from A. S. W. Rosenbach, one of America's greatest book dealers and collectors. The Rosenbach Lectures are intended to further scholarship and scholarly publication in bibliography and book history, broadly understood. Begun in 1931, when Christopher Morley served as first Rosenbach Fellow, the Rosenbach Lectures are the longest continuing series of bibliographical lectureships in the United States. Over the years, lecture topics have included fifteenth-century printing, the relationships between print and manuscript, papermaking, book illustration, American reading and publishing, and medical and scientific texts. Many of these lectures have been published as book-length studies by the University of Pennsylvania Press. Recent lecturers have included Roger Chartier, Robert Darnton, Anthony Grafton, David D. Hall, Janice Radway, Paul Saenger, Peter Stallybrass, Michael Warner, and Elizabeth L. Eisenstein.

Several recent lectures are available as free podcasts:
