Alexander Hamilton's Reports

ALEXANDER HAMILTON'S REPORTS

By CLIFFORD B. CLAPP

I.

The memory of no American statesman has been better served by his official writings than was Hamilton's. In September, 1789, he became Secretary of the Treasury, and in January, 1795, he relinquished the office. Between these dates there appeared in rapid succession the reports that contributed largely to his contemporary fame and toward an encomium sometimes so ardent as to make Henry Cabot Lodge seem conservative in saying, "We look in vain for a man who, in an equal space of time, has produced such direct and lasting effects upon our institutions and our history." While Adams and Jefferson were still living, the anonymous compiler of Hamilton's most important official reports wrote, in 1821, "The 'official reports' of the first Secretary of the Treasury will form a sort of text-book for his successors through distant ages."

The National Archives possess no set of original printed editions of Hamilton's reports. The New York Public Library and other libraries have good sets of varying completeness. In the Library of the New York Historical Society is the collection of them owned by Oliver Wolcott, Hamilton's successor in office. And now in the University of Pennsylvania Library there has been uncovered what appears to be Hamilton's own collection of his reports. These are contained in two volumes, which include also a few of the significant contemporary reports of Jefferson, Knox, and Randolph, and, more important, the manuscript of a lost report by Thomas Scott on the public lands. This report was submitted to Hamilton and never thereafter saw the light of day.

There can be little doubt that these volumes constitute Hamilton's official collection. At the end of the first volume is a list of Contents of that volume in Hamilton's hand. In the other volume there is, in addition to the manuscript report submitted to him, a copy in his hand of certain resolutions of the Continental Congress concerning the public lands.

Oliver Wolcott's set of the reports was probably among the materials he rescued from the fire at the Treasury Department. Hamilton's may have been preserved from destruction by Henry Kuhl in his offices of Chief Clerk in the Comptroller's Office under Hamilton, Assistant Cashier of the Bank of the United States, and Cashier of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Philadelphia; for Kuhl's name, probably an autograph, appears at the head of the first volume, on the title-page of the famous Report on the Public Credit. It is not known how the volumes came to the University of Pennsylvania Library. Of the printed material in the collection more than half of the pieces can reasonably be designated as either outstanding or important documents of our early national administration.

The manuscript of Scott's Report provides the first official statement to the Congress of the United States under the Constitution concerning the land claims and unclaimed lands in the Northwest Territory. It was made by Thomas Scott of Pennsylvania on June 15, 1789. The present writer knows of no other manuscript copy nor any printed edition. While apparently of no great import in itself it gave rise to the report by Hamilton on a public land office, which in turn was a direct incitement of the request of Congress for the report by Jefferson on southwestern and northwestern lands, a printed copy of which is in this collection.

II.

SCOTT'S AND JEFFERSON'S REPORTS

The reports of Scott and Jefferson in these volumes present a view of the northwestern lands that for authority, adequacy, and conciseness will not be surpassed.

The manuscript of Scott's Report bears the caption: "The Committee appointed to consider the State of the unappropriated lands in the Western Territory, and report thereupon, Report . . ." It is written on thirteen pages of English book paper, folded upward at the bottom to fit the volume, and interleaved with blanks. The hand, flourishing like that of a scribe, is yet to be identified. The document is at least presque unique. A copy may yet appear among Hamilton, Jefferson, Sherman, or Huntington papers, or somewhere among land company material, but there is no copy among the papers of the first Congress in the custody of the Clerk of the House, nor in the National Archives; nor is any indexed in the Mereness index of 85,000 cards at the University of Illinois for documents in Washington archives on the Northwest Territory, nor in the smaller collection of related cards in the Library of Congress. The text does not appear in American State Papers nor in the Annals of Congress nor the Journals of the House of Representatives. Above all, it does not appear in Carter's Territorial Papers. It has been cited as appearing in the Annals of Congress, but it is not there.

In *Annals*¹, 1st Congress, volume 1 (1834), column 453, under date of Monday, June 15, 1789, the reference reads as follows: "Western Lands. Mr. Scott, from the committee to consider the state of the unappropriated lands in the Western territory, reported. This report contained a very particular geographical account of that country. Ordered, That this report be referred to a Committee of the Whole upon the state of the Union." Under date of Monday, July 13, 1789, columns 622-632 contain the debate of the Committee of the Whole House upon the report, or rather, apparently, on a resolution, previously debated in May, of Thomas Scott of Pennsylvania for the Committee on the western territory²: "Resolved, That it is the opinion of this committee, that an act of Congress should pass for establishment of a Land Office, and to regulate the terms of granting vacant and unappropriated lands in the Western territory." And finally came the disposition of the Report which cast it into our Hamilton Treasury Volumes. On January 20, 1790, the resolution was laid on the table, but Alexander Hamilton was directed to report a plan for a land office and the report of the Scott committee was referred to him for his consideration. The net results were the report of Hamilton, July 20, 1790³, on a plan for disposing of the public lands (a plan that like the earlier one of Jefferson failed of final accomplishment) and the report of Jefferson, November 8, 1791.

Jefferson's Report⁴ consists of eight printed pages. It was mutilated in the Ford and Memorial editions of his works, the portion on the northwestern lands being omitted entirely, although the entire text was available to the editors. It has since been printed in full in Carter's Territorial Papers.

² For Thomas Scott, consult Biographical Dictionary of Congress, and the several publications written under the direction of the Western Pennsylvania Historical Survey. The other members of Scott's committee making the report were Benjamin Huntington and Roger Sherman. A different committee headed by Scott, was appointed for consideration of Scott's resolution on a land office.

Territory).

Scott was ordered "to consider the state of the unappropriated lands in the Western territory"; Jefferson was ordered to report an estimate "of the quantity and situation of the lands not claimed by the Indians, nor granted to, nor claimed by, any citizens of the United States, within the territory ceded to the United States by the State of North Carolina, and within the territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio." In Jefferson's Report as originally separately printed and contained in the Hamilton Treasury Volumes pages 3-5 concern the southwestern lands ceded by North Carolina, and pages 5-8 are on the northwestern lands.

Scott devoted himself to a formal, impersonal, detailed description, mainly in chronological order, of the several rights and grants contained in the territory, with their stipulated acreage, together with the actual sums derived by the United States or due to it from each. Jefferson, writing a personalized, wordy, more readable, but less precise statement, treated of the boundaries and supposed acreage of the several claims, reservations and grants, "from which results the residuary unclaimed mass, whereupon any land law the Legislature may think proper to pass may operate immediately, and without obstruction." But Jefferson was not concerned with the income derived from the land. Following the terms of the Congressional resolution he defined first the Indian claims, then those of citizens, first those reserved by States and then those of individual citizens, an entirely logical sequence. There is nothing in Jefferson's Report to indicate that he made any use of Scott's Report; how could he, since it was buried by Hamilton? But there is a probable allusion to Hamilton's Report when he speaks of "Some of these claims, being already under a special reference, by order of Congress . . ."

A detailed comparison of the two reports would be too extensive for the present article. It is sufficient to say that Scott begins with the cession by New York in 1781, delineates the boundaries of the United States set by the Treaty of Paris, treats of the cession by Virginia in 1784 with the reservation in favor of Clarke and his soldiers, a contingent reservation for the Virginia troops, and a reservation in favor of "the Kaskaskias," mentions the Massachusetts cession of 1785 and outlines that of Connecticut, goes on to treat of the Indian treaties of 1784 and 1785 in relation to the Connecticut cession, and takes up the sale of the Seven Ranges, the Cutler and Sargent grant, the Symmes grant, that to Flint and Parker, the sale to Pennsylvania, the Congressional reservations of 1788 in favor of "the Kaskaskias," and the Morgan contract. Jefferson treats of many, but not all, of these; and he supplies various details and reservations not cited by Scott.

Summing up, Scott reports that sales have been made "to the amount of 4,936,864 $\frac{15}{90}$ Dollars," and Jefferson says that "there remain at the disposal of the United States upwards of twenty-one millions of acres, in this north-western quarter."

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES

The collection comprises 46 pieces, 13 in volume I, 33 in volume II. They date from May, 1785, to April, 1794. The arrangement of the documents in the volumes is not perfectly chronological, although aside from those on the public lands there was a tendency to make it so. In the following list, aimed at identification of the issues rather than clarification of the works, the pieces are given in the order of occurrence. Each title is much abbreviated, showing the first and the significant words, sometimes from the caption or the epistolary introduction. The imprint is given in full when on the page bearing the title but is abbreviated in curves if printed elsewhere in the publication; in this case (C & S) indicates Childs and Swaine, the usual printers. Imprints or portions supplied from Evans's American Bibliography or other outside source are given, usually abbreviated, in square brackets. The Evans citation numbers are in brackets when identification of the issues is in doubt. Seven of the printed pieces have not been found in Evans, but some of these are known elsewhere.
