Maker Workshops

The 2016 ACT | UJ Arts & Culture Conference gave delegates the chance to engage in a creative workshop of their choice on the first day of the #creativeintersections conference.

These practical workshops took the form of two follow-on sessions, collectively resulting in a two-hour crash course. With eleven diverse workshops on offer, the hardest part was deciding which one to engage in.

With the conference ethos of multi-disciplinarity kept in mind, delegates found themselves immersed in a workshop that offered new skill-sets and ways of thinking. Each of the seminars delved into a specific creative endeavor, offering those in attendance practical experience and theoretical understanding in a relaxed, but stimulating, environment.

The workshops included:

The Makers Library Network in partnership with British Council presents the Hologram Maker

Maker Librarians from Thinking and Geekulcha curated a participatory skills-sharing workshop, which looked at off-screen data representation such as holograms and Google glass.

Identity Maker

The online creative showcase, Between 10and5 curated a how-to course in self-branding, developing and managing your own online identity. "Having an online presence and knowing how to share your work or service with the right people is key in today's digital marketplace," said Layla Leiman, the editor-in-chief of Between 10and5. This workshop shone some light on how to create, curate, and communicate yourself online.

Audience Maker

Learnings from the Business and Arts South Africa \(BASA\) and British Council Connect ZA's yearlong audience development programme was shared with delegates, as a snapshot of how the South African arts community can be impacted in a sustained and on-going way. The workshop focused intensely on training arts organisations in interrogating current audiences, to be able to significantly grow new audiences, and to become audience-focused organisations.

Play Maker

In this experiential energizing PLAY!-shop, artist Anthea Moys invited delegates to interact with a collective of individuals to find effective creative solutions through play. "Attendees can expect to have fun and engage in a one-of-a-kind experience where, through playful interdisciplinary processes, we respond, steal, adapt, rework, unlearn, make mistakes, fail, break and remake the originally accepted 'rules of the game' so as to create new techniques for working and playing together," says Moys. "And we will make something," she adds, "what we will make will depend on what you bring to the party." So, make sure to bring your sense of adventure, your curiosity and come and play.
