PRIMARY CHALLENGES IN LEARNING ENGLISH

Today, English is one of the most common and frequently used languages in the world. However, very often the process of learning the English language may cause difficulties and problems associated with one or other mistakes. The reason for difficulties may be not only students' mistakes but also teachers'. We will consider the most common difficulties and challenges that sufficiently large numbers of students suffer from in the learning process.

Too inflated self-criticism. Many students themselves add challenges, posing a very high and sometimes unattainable bar. Teachers in practice often encounter a mistake when the student is trying to achieve the highest possible results in a relatively short period of time. For example, he wants to learn to write or speak English fluently without hitches and accent. But in practice this may not only be difficult, but simply impossible. Experiencing difficulties, the student often gives up and drops out.

Another mistake is thinking in their native language and a translation into a foreign language in mind. This is a very common mistake, which, however, brings a lot of difficulties and problems in the course of the study. Its essence lies in the fact that a man thinks in his native language, and only then translates it into a foreign one. The difficulties lie in the fact that he also thinks about the correctness of the grammatical component of his speech, which as a result turns out to be too much for the brain. By doing so, people communicate quite slowly, while periodically straying. Therefore, you must learn to overcome such difficulties. To do this, just try to think in English. That's what makes small children who are just learning to speak.

Next is mispronunciation taught by the teacher. Today even many professional educators speak with an accent, or mispronunciation. As a result, their students learn from them initially incorrect pronunciation, as well as speak with a slight accent. This is a serious problem in our time. To avoid such difficulties, you should listen to native speakers.

Demolition of the educational process on the part of teachers. This error relates more to the work of teachers. And such complexity and difficulties can arise not only from the study of English, but also in many other sciences. You've heard the phrase from the teacher that student has no innate abilities to study the subject, so he should not even try, because he still won't not get anything. So, it is not true. For example, the matrix method of learning English refutes this view, as the practice has shown that the subject can be studied by anyone without any difficulties and problems.

The final mistake features that too much attention is paid to grammar. Remember the approach with which you have been taught at school, and the related difficulties and problems. The child is given a lot of complex grammatical rules, which the student often does not even know. As a result, it causes significant difficulties in the process of learning, as a student gives up due to unwillingness to learn hundreds of grammar rules.

Now, think about how a small child learns his mother tongue? True, it does it by ear, just imitating their parents and others. The child does not know any rules, but absorbs new knowledge naturally. Today, anyone can learn English without too much difficulty and hardship. According to experts, serious difficulties and mistakes at the English classes can only occur due to the lack of a proper commitment. All other difficulties and problems can be overcome.
