RESUME OF CLARENCE F. KLAMM, JR.

Clarence F. Klamm, Jr., was born in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1921. He attended Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri, and received the degree of Bachelor of Science in Electrical Engineering in February 1943.

During World War II he served first as a radar instructor at the Anti-Aircraft Artillery School at Camp Davis, North Carolina, and later as a Fire Control Consultant in the Pacific. He completed this military tour in the U. S. Army in the Pacific with the rank of Captain.

Returning to civilian life in 1946, he accepted a position as Research Engineer with the Department of Electrical Engineering, Washington University, in connection with a U.S. Army Signal Corps project investigating diversity reception. In 1948 he received the degree of Master of Science from Washington University and joined the faculty of the Department of Electrical Engineering. In 1951 he accepted an appointment at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School as a Professor of Electronics.

He has taken additional advanced work in Electrical Engineering, Mathematics and Physics at the University of Illinois, Stanford University, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is currently a candidate for the Ph.D. at Stanford University.

He has served as a research and engineering consultant for many industrial organizations. Among these are Lockheed Missiles and Space Division, Technical Operations, Inc., Laboratory for Electronics, Cubic Corporation, RCA Service Company, Firestone Engineering Laboratories, and others. His major interests have been in the analysis and synthesis of modern complex systems.
