

FROM THE EDITORS

Aloha! We are pleased to welcome you to this very important special issue on technology and indigenous languages. This theme runs throughout the articles, columns, and reviews.

We thank Nicholas Ostler and Jon Reyhner for serving as guest editors and want to recognize the time and attention they devoted to producing this issue. It is a long but hopefully rewarding process. Our guest editors bring new perspectives which are invaluable to the journal.

We are pleased with the diversity of our growing readership and welcome any feedback or suggestions you might have. Our journal remains free and free from advertisements due to the University of Hawai'i NFLRC's and Michigan State University CLEAR's continued financial support. In order to continue demonstrating the readership that allows us to publish for free, we ask all readers who have not done so to please fill out your free subscription. We thank you for your continued support and hope you find both our regular and special issues interesting and helpful.

Sincerely,

Mark Warschauer & Dorothy Chun
