

Ethnic Studies Review Volume 23*Contributors

Michael P. Perez earned his Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of California at Riverside in 1997 upon completing field-work and completing his dissertation on indigenous identity in Guam. Previously an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Guam (1997-98), Michael is currently an Assistant Professor of Sociology at California State University Fullerton. His teaching and scholarly interests include racial, ethnic, and indigenous relations, Pacific studies, crime and deviance, and social psychology.

Livia Käthe Wittmann is professor and founding member of Feminist Studies at the University of Canterbury in New Zealand. She gained her Ph.D. in Budapest, Hungary, spent three years as an Alexander von Humboldt Fellow in Tübingen, Germany, and lectured for a number of years at Monash University, Melbourne, Australia. For eighteen years she taught in the German Department at Canterbury. Her publications include books and articles on twentieth century German literature, comparative literary studies, feminist literary criticism, and feminist ethnography.

Stephen B. Isabirye, Ph.D. is a former research associate in the Departments of Sociology and History at Northern Arizona University. He is currently working on a book manuscript on the Redevelopment Crisis in Uganda.

Kooros M. Mahmoudi, Ph.D. is currently a Professor of Sociology and Social Work at Northern Arizona University.

Joseph M. Conforti is at the Department of Sociology at the State University of New York, Old Westbury.

David L. Briscoe, Ph.D., CFLE, is at the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Gerontology at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

Cynthia Kasee holds a Ph.D. in American Indian Studies from the Union Institute. Her dissertation was an ethnologic study of the Florida Seminoles and Miccosukees. A full-time faculty member in the integrated teaching program "The Learning Communities," she teaches Native Studies, Non-Western Perspectives, and Florida History.