Editors' Note

This international seminar on Language Maintenance and Shift II is a continuation of the previous international seminar with the same theme conducted by the Master Program in Linguistics, Diponegoro University in July 2011. We do hope that the seminar with this theme can become a yearly program of the Master Program in Linguistics, Diponegoro University, as we see that this topic still needs our serious attention due to the inevitable impact of globalization on the life of indigenous languages.

We would like to thank the seminar committee for putting together the seminar that gave rise to this collection of papers. Thanks also go to the head and secretary of the Master Program in Linguistics Diponegoro University, without whom the seminar would not have been possible.

The table of contents lists all the papers presented at the seminar. The first five papers are those presented by invited keynote speakers. They are Prof. Dr. Hanna (Balai Bahasa Provinsi Sulawesi Tenggara, Indonesia), Prof. Dr. Bambang Kaswanti Purwo (Atma Jaya Catholic University, Indonesia), Dr. Sugiyono (Language Center, Indonesia), Peter Suwarno, Ph.D (Arizona State University), and Herudjati Purwoko, Ph.D (Diponegoro University).

In terms of the topic areas, there are 33 papers on language maintenance, 24 papers on language learning, 19 paper on sociolinguistics, 15 paper on pragmatics, 8 papers on discourse analysis, 8 paper on morphology, 2 papers on syntax, 2 papers on translation, 1 papers on psycholinguistics, 1 papers on phonology, and 1 papers on semantics.

EMBODIED EXPERIENCES IN METAPHORS IN BAHASA INDONESIA

Abstrak

Metafora merupakan sistem konsep yang memiliki dua aspek, yaitu: ranah target dan sumber. Ranah sumber yang cenderung menunjukkan kategori konkrit digunakan untuk menjelaskan ranah target yang cenderung abstrak. Tulisan ini dimaksudkan untuk menunjukkan faktor yang memotivasi konsep dalam ranah sumber yang memperjelas konsep ranah target. Data yang berupa ungkapan metaforis diambil dengan menggunakan purposive sampling techniques, dari wacana surat pembaca koran harian berbahasa Indonesia yang dipilih secara acak. Metode referensial, distributional, abductive inferensial, dan reflective introspective digunakan untuk menganalisis data. Hasil penelitian menunjukkan bahwa metafora merefleksikan pengalaman yang dirasakan oleh tubuh dan panca indera yang dapat dikelompokkan menjadi pengalaman visual, fisik, indera pengecap (lidah), dan indera penciuman. Ini mengimplikasikan bahwa bahasa digunakan untuk menunjukkan pengalaman yang terekam dalam manah yang diperoleh dari kehidupan sehari-hari ketika melakukan interaksi dan komunikasi dengan orang lain.

Kata Kunci: metafora, pengalaman visual, pengalaman fisik, pengalaman pengecap, pengalaman penciuman

INTRODUCTION

Metaphor has been studied from various disciplines such as philosophy, psychology, anthropology, linguistics, and it is approached from different perspectives. Cognitive linguistics views metaphors in different ways from those proposed by the initiator, Aristotles, stating that metaphor is a sign of a distinctive language ability of a person which characterizes certain language capacity (Punter, 2007:12). Metaphor in Aristotles' view is different from that discussed in this paper. Metaphor is viewed not only as a part of language but also an evidence that language is used for conceptualizing a certain entity. Language is acquired and used in human interaction and communication, it is not a frozen form in a certain type of discourse. It is used daily for fulfilling needs.

Metaphors is formulated based on the expressions indicating conceptualization. They represent what people think, feel, and act or experience which occur due to human communication and interaction. The experiences are stored in their mind and build frames which can be used when needed. Since metaphorical expressions indicating conceptualization, they have forces different from the literal meanings. Neisser (2003:31) says that due to its force, metaphorical expression requires people to understand further from its literal meaning. Croft and Cruse (2004) added that to comprehend metaphors requires two different interpretation, i.e. violation and anomaly of the literal meaning. In this paper, the basis of interpretation is not from violation and anomaly but from conceptualization process conveyed in the metaphors. According to Mey (1993:60), metaphors are considered as a life view, since metaphors represent thought and experience in daily life, showing a way of thinking influenced by the environment where people live. To show conceptualization, semantic analysis is used in order to elaborate the references used to uncover the reality represented.

Metaphor is believed as a system consisting of basic components i.e. a target domain, a source domain, and their relationship. The basis of analysis is the idea given by Lakoff and Johnson (2003) saying that metaphors are used actively by humans in their daily communication. The metaphorical expressions used indicate experiences, ideas, and feeling encountered in life. Fauconnier (1997) and Turner (1991) in Evans and Green (2006:8) say that language only gives prompts in conceptualization process which requires meaning to be constructed. Meaning is not labelled but constructed. Meaning construction can be explained based on the experiences encountered by human. According to the theory of embodiment (Evans and Green (2006:157), in cognitive linguistics, the most fundamental point is the connection between the structure of the concept and the experiences felt in the body and senses. The experience builds image schemas. The image schemas are derived from the experience of the senses, the body, and perception as the result of the interaction and activities (Evans dan Green, 2006:178). In relation with metaphors, the experiences embodied can be identified from the metaphorical expressions used. This agrees with Lakoff in Kess (1992:231) saying that thought is a stored experience, perception, physical movement, and physical and social experiences. Through metaphor, humans organize their physical experiences reflected in image schemas. Image schemas are believed that they are embodied (Lakoff in Croft dan Cruse, 2004) and grounded (Lakoff and Turner in Croft and Cruse, 2004:44). In one hand, image schemas are abstract, but on the other hand, image schemas are schematic since they are embodied—stored in the body and recorded in the mind.

This paper is trying to discover the experiences embodied in Indonesian society through the metaphors found in the letters to the editors. What experiences and how they are encountered will be discussed in this paper to show how language can represent what Indonesian people think, feel, and experience in connection with what happened in their surrounding.

RESEARCH METHOD

This research is descriptive-qualitative since it depicts the facts concerning metaphors formulated from the metaphorical expressions used by the writer in the letters to the editors. The data are the metaphorical expressions chosen purposively in the letters to the editors of the daily newspaper written in bahasa Indonesia. They are collected by nonparticipant observation with note-taking and page-filing techniques. To analyze the data, the writer used some methods namely referential, distributional, reflective-introspective (Sudaryanto, 1993), and abductive inferential (Krippendorff, 2004) methods. The methods are used to show how experiences are embodied structurally in the metaphors. Referential method is used in initial analysis for showing the concepts referred to by the expressions used as the data. It is then continued with distributional, reflective introspective and abductive inferential methods for showing conceptualization conveyed. Reflective-introspective method is also used to elaborate how the experiences encountered sensically and bodily.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

From the analysis, it is found that metaphors formulated from the expressions used in the letters to the editors can be categorized according to the concept of the source domain. This is based on the idea that language is not only as a means of communication but also as a window of human thought. Therefore, metaphors represent verbal language that can be grouped according to the conceptual correspondence, i.e experiences, natural, directional, temporal, spacial, and technological. However, this paper only focuses on the experience-based metaphors which can be divided into visual experiences, bodily experiences, the sense of the smell, and the sense of the taste.

Visual Experiences

Visual metaphors are those having connection with the experiences of seeing. Ability of seeing can help people get knowledge of the world or surrounding. The knowledge may be related with the characteristics of the nature, in terms of its feature, volume or size, movement, number, and function. The experiences can be identified from the source domain of the metaphors, that is used to explain the target domain. The embodied experiences can make the target domain which is usually abstract or difficult concept easy to understand since visual experiences can be easily proven.

The visual experiences are represented by the expressions such as digelontorkan (flushed), dikucurkan (disbursed), diraup / meraup (obtained), mencaplok (annex), merebut (seize), bengkaknya (swelling), menggiurkan (tantalizing), membudaknya (booming), gempuran (onslaught), dibombardir (bombarded). The word digelontorkan (flushed), for example, indicates a liquid in big amount moving very quickly. People can see how a liquid in big amount moves very quickly, for example, flood. The word dikucurkan (disbursed) implies how people can see or observe a liquid flows. The word diraup (obtained) implies an experience looking at a floating object which is grasped. See some examples below.

- (1) tagihan TelkomselFlash saya begitu bengkaknya
'my TelkomselFlash bill was swelling'

From the example (1), a construction can be formulated as follows. +TAGIHAN ADALAH LUKA BENGGAK+ (BILL IS A SWOLLEN INJURY). The entity luka bengkak 'swollen injury' is a concept used to explain the concept of dana 'fund' represented by tagihan internet 'internet bill', which is rising suddenly. The quickness of the rising is conceptualized as the injury which is suddenly swelling. The rising in the injury is to illustrate how the bill is getting costlier. The experience of seeing how something is rising is stored in the mind through visual experience happening in everyday life.

The following example is related with the government program in dealing with poverty. Poverty is one of the most difficult problems in Indonesia. There have been a lot of programs run to solve it. However, it still exists until at present. In order to minimize it, the government has a special program focused on. To illustrate how the program is conducted, the writer researched used the following expression.

- (2) program penanggulangan kemiskinan yang digulirkan
'poverty protection program which is moved'

From the expression in (2), it can be constructed +PROGRAM PENANGGULANGAN KEMISKINAN ADALAH RODA+ (POVERTY PROTECTION PROGRAM IS A WHEEL). The entity of wheel is used for explaining the concept of the program for protecting poverty due to its characteristics, namely ability to run or move. How a wheel is moving can be proven visually, then such experience is stored in the mind. When there is a similar event, it is expressed through a combination of words which can be identified. Another problem is indicated by the following expression.

- (3) angka kemiskinan begitu sulit ditekan
'the poverty rate is difficult to be pressed'.

The expression in (3) can be the basis of formulating +ANGKA KEMISKINAN ADALAH BALON DI ATAS AIR+ (+A POVERTY RATE IS A FLOATING BALLOON+), conceptualizing the poverty rate like a balloon floating on the water. This can be seen when there is a balloon floating on the water and sunk; what happens is that the balloon is always floating. The conceptualization explains how difficult it is to decrease the poverty rate. The entity of the floating balloon is used for explaining the concept of the poverty rate due to its characteristics, namely being difficult to decrease.

- (4) pandangan-pandangan miring yang tercipta.
'sloping views created'

From the expression in (4), it can be formulated +PANDANGAN-PANDANGAN ADALAH TIANG+ (VIEW IS A PILAR). The entity tiang (pillar) is used to explain the concept of views due to its characteristic: it can slop or stand firm. The characteristic of the pillar that can slop or stand firm can be proven visually. The experience of witnessing is stored in the mind, then it can build a schema that becomes a frame.

Bodily Experiences

Bodily experiences can be the bases of the uses of the metaphorical expression. Since experiences are embodied, body can feel when there is something happened to it. The experiences are stored in the mind and used when there is an event similar happening. The expressions indicating bodily experiences are among other things bersahabatlah (be a close friend), rangkullah (embrace), terlilit (entangled), digenjot (encouraged), kejaran / mengejar (chase), dihimpit (pressed), teracuni (poisoned), beban di pundak (load on the shoulder), menghajar (beat up /chasten). The following examples show how bodily experiences can be the bases of explaining the concept of the target domain with that of the source domain.

The words bersahabatlah (be a close friend) and rangkullah (embrace) in

(5) bersahabatlah dengan alam, singkirkan ego, rangkullah alam

'be a close friend with the nature, disregard your ego, embrace the nature'

indicate a concept of a close relation. The two words can be the bases of formulating +ALAM ADALAH SAHABAT+ (THE NATURE IS A CLOSE FRIEND), since a close friend is someone having close relationship with us, having commitment to protect each other. With close friend, someone will feel comfortable, be able to share, not hate each other, understand our strengths and weaknesses. The experience can be the basis of corresponding the concept of the source domain 'close friend' with the concept of the target domain 'nature'. The bodily experience is felt when we are close to a friend, what we are doing and our close friend is doing to us when we are close to them, i.e we protect each other for being sad and sorrow.

The word terlilit (entangled) in

(6) terlilit utang

'entangled / trapped in debt'

indicates a concept of being difficult. The word terlilit (entangled / trapped) can be the basis of formulating +UTANG ADALAH TALI YANG MELILIT+ (DEBT IS A ROPE TRAPPING / ENTANGLING). The conceptualization towards a rope trapping is similar to the conceptualization towards a debt due to the same characteristics that is causing trouble. The experience of feeling trapped may correspond to the concept of the source domain 'a rope trapping / entangling' with the word 'debt' can be proven physically. Body can feel it; it can feel difficult to breathe. Such experience is the same as when someone has a big debt.

Tasting Experiences

The experience of tasting can be the basis of correspondance between the concept of the source domain with the concept of the target domain. The experience can feel whether an entity is salty, delicious, tasteless, sweet, tasty, sour, or bitter. The experience of tasting the food is stored in the mind so that it can distinguish one type of taste with another. When there is an event that can be conceptualized with such experience, metaphorical experiences are used. From the experiences, a construction can be formed showing conceptual correspondence that can be inferred through the experience of tasting. The expression indicating such experience among other things hambar (tasteless), kental (thick).The word hambar (tasteless) in the following example,

(7) kasus penyelesaian rasa keadilan di lembaga formal yang berasa hambar

'The solution of the justice case in the formal institution feels tasteless' indicates a concept of 'incompleteness' due to the ingredients used that are not complete or the proportion of the materials is not good. The word hambar (tasteless) in example (7) can be the basis of formulating +KASUS PENYELESAIAN RASA KEADILAN ADALAH MASAKAN YANG HAMBAR+ (THE SOLUTION OF THE JUSTICE CASE IS A TASTELESS FOOD), since food or drinks is the only entity which can be tasteless due to incomplete ingredients or proportion. The correspondence connecting the concept of the source domain 'masakan yang hambar' (tasteless food) and the target domain 'kasus penyelesaian rasa keadilan' (the solution of the justice case) can be proven by the experience of tasting when the sense tastes the food with incomplete ingredient or proportion.

Smelling Experiences

Smelling experiences can tell us whether something is smelly or has nice fragrance. Such experiences can be identified from the metaphorical expressions used by the writer researched namely the concept of the words berbau (smelling / smelly), aroma (flavor), tercium (smelled), merebak (spread), kebusukan (decayed).

The word tercium (smelled) in the following example,

(8) Kasus dugaan korupsi ... sudah tercium

'suspected corruption case ... has been smelled'

indicates a concept of 'being stingy' or 'smelly' of something decayed. This word can be the basis of formulating +KASUS DUGAAN KORUPSI ADALAH BANGKAI / ENTITAS YANG BERBAU TIDAK SEDAP+ (SUSPECTED CORRUPTION CASE IS AN ENTITY WHICH IS STINGY), since a stingy entity is easily smelled. The experience of smelling a bad odor can be the basis of corresponding the concept of the source domain 'decayed entity' to the concept of the target domain 'suspected corruption case'. Conceptualized the same as cadaver, corruption case is easily uncovered by the public, since it is an act which causes loss for the government and the society, that makes people concern about it.

CONCLUSION

The explanation above can be concluded that the embodied experiences in the metaphors can be used to show conceptualization in the source domain to explain the target domain. They can be used as evidences that people use language, in this case, metaphors for showing that language can represent what people experience in their life. Language is used for showing their thought, feeling, and act. Language is used for managing knowledge of the world. This implied that the embodied experiences discussed can be the resources of constructing meaning or conceptualization. They are closely related with the cognitive activities of humans in using language during communication and or interaction. The experiences can be the basis of making difficult concepts easily to understand.
