LITERATURE REVIEW

Presidential library is a place in the form of a library or museum built in honor of the president who has served the nation and the State and managed by the State (Kessel, 2009).

Technically a presidential library should ideally not only collect for the papers, records and historical materials of the Presidents, but also all things associated with him before, during and after becoming president.

Presidential Libraries give the chance to see, hear, and participate in the events that changed our lives and made us who we are as a nation.

Presidential Digital Repository Concept Inspired by Indonesia OneSearch
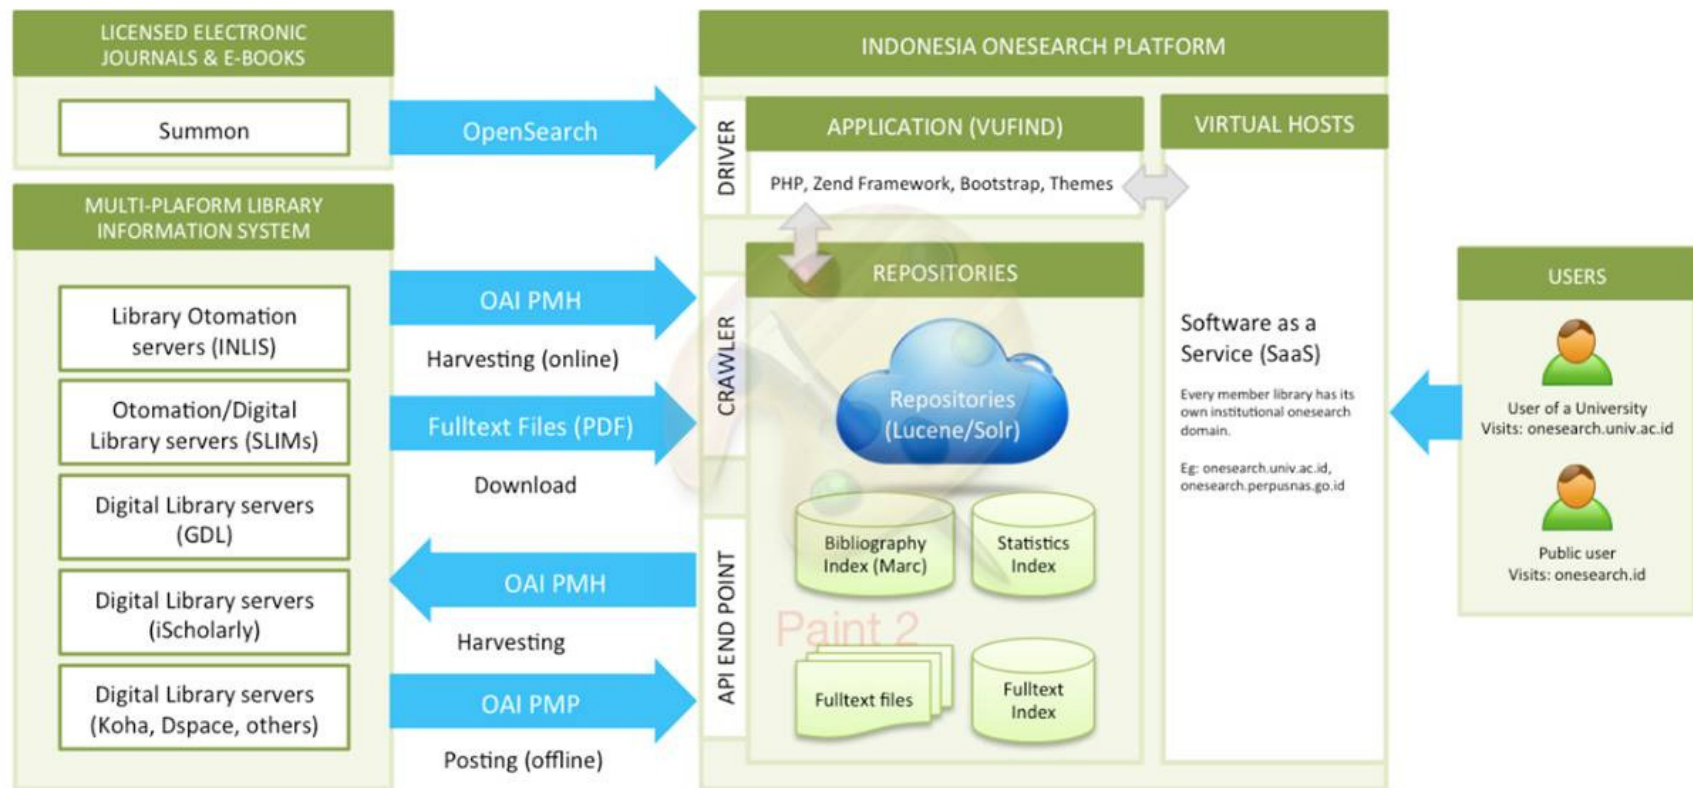

CONCLUSIONS

- Presidential papers are very important documents and have high historical value; therefore, they need to be preserved and disseminated to the public to give them inspirations. There should be a new development strategy in developing presidential libraries. Dissemination strategy by using repository technology and federated search are the most possible strategies so that the presidential libraries could collaborate in developing their collections and disseminating presidential information.
- There is a need for government intervention for the continuous existence of the presidential libraries to become a source of inspiration for the people of Indonesia
