Cross-national news repertoires study

- AIM:
 - How do people make sense of their news consumption?
 - How do they build repertoires or media ensembles of news consumption?

Cross-national news repertoires study

1. National starting point
 - What do the national landscapes of news consumption look like?
 - How can the national repertoire ensembles be mapped reliably?
 - Q-methodological study in 12 countries: 12 news repertoire ensembles
2. Cross-national comparison
 - Are news repertoires nation-specific or shared across national borders?
 - Are news repertoires related to transnational media systems?

Our study is immersed in debates about 'national essentialism' vs. 'transnationalism'

TRANSNATIONALISM

- Today's media cultures are translocal: methodological nationalism is inappropriate in an age of global communication networks
- The (cross-)national perspective "obscures our view of what media cultures might be in an era of media flows that consistently overlap national borders"
(Hepp & Couldry, 2009, p. 32)

NATION-CENTRIC

- Translocal processes of mediatization are territorialized according to national cultures and (supra)national media systems
- "communication systems are still in significant respects national (...) the nation is still a very important marker of difference" (Curran & Park, 2000, p. 11f)

Our stance

«We should move past the debate between the global and the state in media studies in order to better understand the interaction among competing forces. Just as certain media/social/cultural processes cannot be examined if the analysis remains focused on states, other issues that are central to media systems need to be considered by studying state institutions and dynamics» (Flew & Waisbord, 2015)

Our study examines the balance of 'national' vs. 'transnational' in the area of news audience repertoires:

Conclusion

- Nationally anchored news repertoires (49) from transnational news repertoires (9)
 - Individual national news repertoires are not nationally unique
 - All but two repertoires in a national repertoire ensemble are similar to repertoires in other national repertoire ensembles
- National news repertoire ensembles are unique repertoire constellations, produced by the national territorialization of global trends in media technologies and contents
- The 9 transnational news repertoires transcend the supra-national media systems (Hallin & Mancini; Brüggemann et al.; Perusko et al.)
- Audiences' news repertoires have both anchorage in national and transnational media landscapes

Discussion

- 100% identical research designs not possible
 - Examples adapted to each country
 - Different offer of news outlets
 - Slight differences in sampling
- Q methodology is qualitative → how to include the voice of the 324 informants?

Discussion

- Next step: doing a first-order analysis of all 326 individual Q sorts, i.e. not starting from an already nationally patterned database?
- “Without the data first being aggregated on a national-territorial basis, the cases from various cultural contexts are compared the one with the other. In this way one can obtain a system of categories that describes not simply national differences, but more general common factors and differences in cultural patterns.” (Hepp, 2013, p. 14of.)
