Presentation structure

- Methodology & findings
- The solution –about the Dissertation Game
- Background to the online development
- Demonstration
- Moving forward

Methodology

- Dissertation tutors 2
- Dissertation supervisors 30
- Post graduate students 50
- Focus groups
- Questionnaire staff/students
- Interviews dissertation tutors
- Observation dissertation lectures

Methodology

Student

- Lack of understanding of:
- WHAT to do
  - learning and assessment criteria
- HOW to do it
  - appropriate English language functions e.g
    justifying choices;
    critically evaluating;

• Staff

- Students often failed to:
  - Show understanding of approach to research
  - Link topic to literature
  - Discuss findings
  - Link findings to literature review
  - Link conclusions to literature

The solution: new T&L materials- a game

- To increase their understanding of the learning and assessment criteria
- To be provided with models of language functions to meet criteria

- Matching exercise:
- Assessment criteria

 Examples of language functions

Background to the online development

- Using the rapid e-learning development tool: Articulate.
- Question formats are quite different online to paper based version, but content is the same.
- Transcript written by Northumbria, audio by Hertfordshire.

Demonstration

The Dissertation Game

Moving forward

- Carry out staff and student testing.
- CURRENT Refine and amend as appropriate, carry out second round of testing if necessary.
- Produce support documents and screencapture videos.
- Carry out workshops and train staff on the Game.
  - Promote to Business School staff and students in both Universities.
  - Consider support database to capture the student results (currently students print or email – optional).
  - Look at the wider perspective of use of the Game in other ulletFaculties and other Universities.
  - Publication.
