

The 'jobs for generals' scandal highlighted important issues about UK defence procurement

A European-level review process is needed for all non-EU defence foreign investment

Launching a new collaboration: Euroscepticism and the European project

Managing Editor

Next week will see the launch of a series on euroscepticism. This series is the result of a collaboration between LSE's British Politics and Policy and EUROPP blogs and the University of Nottingham's Ballots & Bullets.

Euroscepticism has been a growing issue in the media with David Cameron's recent and long-awaited speech announcing his commitment to hold a referendum on Britain's EU membership should the Conservatives win the next election. Whilst Cameron has asserted his own commitment to staying in the EU, but with negotiated terms of membership, some in his party support leaving the EU. Our series will address Conservative euroscepticism and parliamentary rebellions with posts from Tim Bale and Philip Cowley.

As well as Conservative euroscepticism we are also seeing the rise of parties such as UKIP and far-right parties that are using an anti-EU platform from which to express their views. Matt Goodwin will examine these parties and explore the implications of their increased prominence for the broader political scene.

Alex Smith will look at the view from Scotland and what Scottish independence could mean for the country's position in the EU.

As well as examining eursocepticism within Britain, our series will look further afield to Denmark and Iceland (Benjamin Leruth), Greece (Kyriaki Nanou and Susannah Verney), and the US (Kelly Katrina), and also within the institutions of the EU itself (Natalie Brack).

Oliver Daddow will outline the history of euroscepticism in the UK, whilst Vladimir Rauta will look at the potential future scenarios for a UK withdrawal from the EU.

The series will also examine a number of other interesting themes. How do young people feel about the EU (Stuart Fox)? How has the EU been portrayed in fiction (Steven Fielding)? Why has the EU been unable to effectively tackle euromyths (Simon Usherwood)? Finally, we talk to Will Hutton about the European project and its future in an increasingly uncertain world.

Nigel Farage, Leader of the United Kingdom Independence

Party (Credit: Euro Realist Newsletter, CC BY 2.0)

Download our latest eCollection: 2012 London Olympics

Latest book reviews

You may also be interested in the following posts (automatically generated):

- 1. Euroscepticism is most common in Wales, the Midlands and among the over-60s. The wording of any potential referendum question will be crucial
- 2. Euroscepticism is now a powerful force for the radical right and UKIP is well placed to harness it
- 3. The EU Referendum rebellion has left David Cameron with little room to manoeuvre and is picking apart his liberal conservative project
- 4. Cameron's pandering to euroscepticism and the illusionary 'national interest' is a failure of leadership and leaves Britain in a lose-lose situation

This entry was posted in Europp, Euroscepticism and tagged eu, Europe, euroscepticism, Eurosceptics. Bookmark the permalink.

Your email address will not

Your email address will not be published. Required fields are marked *

Name *

Email *

Website

Comment

You may use these HTML tags and attributes: <abbr title=""> <acronym title=""> <blockquote cite=""> <cite> <code>   <q cite=""> <strike>

- Austerity and Economic policy
- Party politics and elections
- Public Services and the Welfare State
- Localism and the Big Society
- Electoral and constitutional reform
- Central government functions
- Fairness and Equality
- Environmental Policy
- Foreign Policy and Defence
- Media and Communications
- Weekly Political Blog Round
 Up

Join us on Pinterest

This week's Popular Posts – click the 'Popular Blogs' tab above to see the top for this month

- It is entirely possible that Britain could leave the European Union within the next decade 745 view(s) | posted on January 14, 2013
- Five minutes with Colin Crouch: "A post-democratic society is one that continues to have and to use all the institutions of democracy, but in which they increasingly become a formal shell" 724
 - view(s) | posted on February 5, 2013
- Oxford should withdraw its current policy on postgraduate funding immediately 581 view(s) | posted on February 6, 2013
- London has certainly seen a big increase in private renters but it's not the city with the biggest proportion of private renters in England 399 view(s) |

posted on February 4, 2013

 Gender differences in educational outcomes are disappearing and yet there remains a gender gap in science 334 view(s) | posted on November 7, 2012

Subscribe by email
Please enter your email addres
Blogroll
Ballots & Bullets Charlie Beckett/POLIS Democratic Audit Institute for Government Joseph Rowntree Foundatio LSE Research Online LSE SERC Mainly Macro Market Square Not the Treasury View Our Kingdom Politics in Spires Whitehall Watch
Archives
 February 2013 January 2013 December 2012 November 2012 October 2012 September 2012 August 2012 July 2012 June 2012 May 2012 April 2012 February 2012 January 2012 Jeember 2011 November 2011 October 2011 September 2011 August 2011 July 2011 June 2011 May 2011 April 2011 March 2011 February 2011 September 2010 April 2011 March 2011 February 2011 September 2010 November 2010 October 2010 September 2010 August 2010 July 2010 June 2010 May 2010 April 2010 May 2010 April 2010
March 2010 February 2010

austerity blog round up blogs coalition Conservatives cuts David Cameron defence democracy

Economic Policy
economics economy Ed
Miliband Education elections
Electoral Reform eu
Europe foreign policy
Gordon Brown

government

Higher Education immigration
Impact inequality Labour
Liberal Democrats localism
London media NHS Nick
Clegg Politics
Polls power public spending recession
social media Tony Blair
UK uk
government
uk politics

unemployment voting weekly round up

Yesterday's visitors

1,361 Unique Visitors

Powered By Google Analytics

This work by British Politics and Policy at LSE is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported.

Visit our sister blog: LSE EUROPP blog

■ LSE Public Events

- The Implications of the Israeli and American Elections on the Future of Palestinian-Israeli Relations and the Peace Process
- Globalization, Fear and Insecurity:
 The challenges for cities north and south
- Guatemala and the UN: Rethinking International Security
- Petro-Aggression: When Oil Causes War
- Police Reform in Bosnia and

Visit our sister blog: LSE Review of Books

■ LSE Podcasts

- Design in Nature [Audio]
- A Law of Crisis or A Crisis of Law?
 The EU Legal Order Under Stress
 [Audio]
- The Global Theft of Land: human rights, dispossession and destruction [Audio]
- Can Democracy be Saved?
 Participation, Deliberation and Social Movements [Audio]
- Russia And The First World War: time to think again? [Audio]

Visit our sister blog: the LSE Impact of Social Sciences blog

■ LSE Research Online

- Various features of the design of the new 'High Income Child Benefit charge' look problematic
- UKIP's rise is not just a problem for the Conservatives – they are emerging as the party of choice for disaffected and angry voters from all parties
- Two steps forward, three steps back the current state of sex and relationships education in England

- This is not quite the death knell for

Go home: LSE British Politics and Policy blog

Herzegovina-What went wrong?

On Responsibility and Justice

 Rethinking Diffusion: 1989, the Colour Revolutions, and the Arab Uprisings [Audio] the probation service, but it is certainly the most radical change it has ever seen

- There was more to George Galloway's triumph in the Bradford West by-election than celebrity politics
- There is a complex relationship between legalised prostitution and human trafficking

© 2013 British Politics and Policy at LSE

Bad Behavior has blocked 9028 access attempts in the last 7 days.

This work by British Politics and Policy at LSE is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported.