Where Dreams Go

Alexandra Wronkiewicz

Far off in the misty grey
Over the wet grass and muddy waters
Lies a place where dreams go.
When a dream floats out your brain
And snakes down your ear,
It wisps in the air, then dies in the lake.
Human life has never touched the soil
Because death is an affair that haunts the smoke.
Dreams have purpose
But cannot last forever
Eventually they fade into a breath,
And settle along the lake.
It will remain here useless
Caked with dust and skin,
It will rot here for all eternity.
