Polygamy is a sensitive issue for women around the globe; Indonesian women are no exception. The issue of polygamy has influenced the Indonesian literature including fiction. Antara Ibuku dan Ibuku novel by Suri (2011) is one of Indonesian fictions stressing on polygamy. This study aims to describe the state of women’s acceptances of polygamy; how they perceive love and sense of belonging, how they cope with the infidelity in their marriage lives, and their perspectives about men in general and their husbands. This is a qualitative descriptive research on content analysis. The researcher used the aforementioned novel as the sources of data by collecting, analyzing, and then describing the dialogues in the novel focusing on women perspectives of polygamy from the main female characters. The results showed that women have different ways of perceiving love and sense of belonging, coping with the infidelity in their marriage lives, and perceiving men in general and their husbands. This study only focuses on the women’s perspectives of polygamy. Therefore, it is important for the readers to have sensitivity to see polygamy from other perspectives.
