

JOURNAL POLICY

1. The Journal of the Royal Historical Society of Queensland publishes papers on the history of both Queensland and Australia and its territories. Papers on topics not of national significance and of relevance solely to States other than Queensland will not normally be considered. The Society welcomes the submission of papers both for presentation to meetings of the Society or for publication in the Journal. Papers presented at meetings will automatically be considered for publication in the Journal, provided they are finished works at the time of their delivery, and not subject to delay or revision. Authors need not be members of the Society.
2. Manuscripts should be typed on one side of the paper only, using double spacing and ample margins. Papers should not exceed 6000 words. The editor encourages the submission of short papers and research notes. Maps and photographs for illustrations should accompany the paper. Photographs should be on glossy paper, and preferably of size 15 by 20 centimetres.
3. Papers should include a list of sources used. References may be indicated by numerical superscripts if desired. The references and notes should appear at the end of the paper, in order of appearance. Excessive numbers of references should be avoided.
4. It is a condition of publication in the Journal that the paper has not already been published elsewhere. The Society's constitution and rules provide that the original copy of every paper read or given shall become the property of the Society and authors shall not be at liberty without the consent of the Council of the Society to re-publish them unless the contrary has been so stipulated before-hand.

As the Society is a cultural organisation operating on limited funds, payment is not made for any papers presented or published.
