PARNELL ASKS FOR ENQUIRY COMMITTEE

An Insurrection in Bantam.

RECOVERY OF EMPEROR OF BRAZIL

HALIFAX, N.S., July 11.

The House of Commons will give precedence to government business every day during the remainder of the session.

The life percentage bill has been dropped. Adjournment is expected early in August, but Parliament will be assembled in October. Parnell asks a parliamentary committee to examine the authenticity of the letter charged against him. The government say that a committee is incompetent to conduct such an enquiry. An insurrection has broken out at Bantam; and the insurgents have killed the chief European settlers. The Emperor of Brazil has recovered.

Gold Mirror & Picture Frame Gilding!

JOHN STEVENSON WISHES TO CALL THE Attention of the General Public to the fact that he is the only Gilder in St. John's, in the above line. Parties have been botch ing up or destroying Mirror Frames, of beautiful design, of late, hence my advertisement. I am prepared to challenge any man in St. John's, for $100 a side, to compete with any samples—having spent over ten years in the Fine Art Saloon of Kerr & Sons, Carvers and Gilders, Aberdeen, Scotland, and having the highest of references from the Bon-Accord Carving and Gilding Society, of the same place. I wish the public to know, at least, that after these would-be-gilders once gets your Frame into their hands your Frame is destroyed for ever; no Gilder can ever clean off the smudge they put on it, and it is impossible to burnish it; a Mirror or Picture Frame should always be tipped off with burnished gold. As I am aware of parties who are complaining of being victimised in this way, I would be glad to show my samples to any party who may call at my shop. Parties requiring re-guilding done can have it done as good as can be imported, if it is not I ask no pay. Ornamental Gold Frames manufactured on the premises—which was never done in this country before, 8 x 10 Ornamental Gold Frames a specialty

(We) the Freeman's Journal, transfer the following from the files of the Australian newspapers just to hand ; -"Your Eminence will not remain long away?" asked a Sydney Freeman's Journal representative in conversation with Cardinal Moran on som time ago. "No," the Cardinal replied, "I will be in Rome the 15th of June, and it is my intention to take ship at Naples to come back to Sydney on the 15th day of September, or, at the latest, on the first of October." "Then, as is supposed, there is no truth in the rumours of Jo your Eminence going to Dublin?" "None whatever," his Eminence replied. "The cablegrams in the papers stating that Dr. Walsh is to resign, and that I am to take his place, are sheer nonsense!" The Cardinal went on to show how silly it is to talk of the Archbishop of Dublin resigning his See. Any one at all acquainted with the laws and usages of the Church knows perfectly well that not only was there no probability of the Archbishop doing anything of the kind, but that even if Dr. Walsh adopted such a course, the probability of the Holy See accepting his resignation was even more remote. "And as to Dr. Walsh's views on Irish National affairs involving him in any difficulty," continued the Cardinal, " why, I am myself even more advanced than he is in my aspirations for the National independence of Ireland, and, although I have never made much noise in public, those who know anything of my views and convictions in regard to Ireland's rights-and no one knows them better than my old friend Dr. Walsh, whom I have, if I may so speak, led in many things affecting Ireland's welfare-will give me credit for having the National cause deeply at heart." "What does your Eminence think of the other sensational cables?" "Well," said the Cardinal, "it is of course impossible on such information to tell what action the Holy See really has taken; but it appears to me that it is simply the practices of 'boycotting' which are undoubtedly sometimes carried to excess, especially when introduced into the churches-as was the case in my own diocese in Ireland-as a means of punishing objectionable people, and the resorting to means of violence in the disputes over the possession of land and the payment of rents, that have come under the censure of the Holy See. "Then your Eminence does not think the National movement proper has been assailed or condemned?" "No, I certainly do not; but if such were the case, I do not hesitate to say that the Irish people would be perfectly within their right in disregarding even the command of the Holy See, for with the agitation for self-government are bound up all the dearest hopes of the Irish race, and while the Irish people recognise the national demand as a thing in which no power on earth has any legitimate right to interfere, they are also conscious that it is beyond any power to prevent the triumph of a cause as just as it is sacred.", " Do you think interference of the kind reported would be resented?" "Unquestionably it would, and rightly so, just as any unwarrantable or unreasonable interference in our national affairs in Australia would be resented by Australian Catholics." "The effect of the reported condemnation of the practices just referred to, what does your Eminence think will be." "Well, if, as I have reason to believe, the condemnation is confined to what are sometimes spoken of as ' the excrescences on the National movement,' the effect, I venture to think, will be, if anything, a disappointment to the enemies of Home Rule, for if boycotting and proceedings of a similar kind are discountenanced by the National leaders, hundreds of men, and particularly the educated classes in both Ireland and England, who have to a certain extent held aloof from the Home Rule movement on account of not approving of certain methods adopted to advance it, having their scruples removed, will throw in the weight of their sympathy and support, with the result that even the present Tory Government may be forced to yield to the demand for Irish self-government." "Your Eminence, then, is hopeful that, after all, some good will come out of the action of the Holy See?" "Yes, if it is as I believe, the hands of Mr. Gladstone will be materially strengthened, and the Irish cause itself will be enormously benefitted; and even if things are as bad as represented by some of the cables, the cause cannot suffer in the slightest degree, for the agitation for Home Rule must and shall go on until the victory is gained, no matter from what quarter disapproval or opposition may come." "It is your Eminence's intention to go to Ireland?" "It is unlikely, for I shall have to spend some time in France and Belgium, arranging for some new teaching orders who have been trained for Australia in the Irish houses of the French Christian Brothers and the Brothers of Charity, established by myself; and if I do go to Ireland it will be either in company with Dr. Walsh, who will probably be in Rome when I arrive, or for the pur- I pose of paying his Grace a friendly visit."

BY AUTHOR OF "SET IN DIAMONDS.

A JEALOUS WOMAN'S OATH.

"They said all kinds of absurd things, mamma, without either rhyme or reason. Sir Joycelyn is not well. Austin Chandos said that he is afraid his uncle will never be quite well again. They did not tell me anything which would interest you, my darling. Austin Chandos said he had some very nice books down from London, and that he would ride over to-morrow with them."

"That will be very nice," said Mrs.

"And Mr Cyril Vernon said he had a most beautiful feather from a wing of a bird he shot lately, and that he would bring it to me to-morrow afternoon, I think, he said." "That is very kind, too," said Mrs. Audley, and at these words Lenore's face flushed.

She bent down and kissed her mother's lips.

"She likes him best," thought Gladie. " I have found out her secret-she likes Cyril the best; but she shall never have him, for I swear to win him if I lose all the world besides."

"You must be careful, Lenore, that your two friends do not become rivals,' said Mrs. Audley, and again the girl bent her beautiful, flushed face.

"They can never be rivals, mamma," she said they are so entirely differentone is a knight, the kind of man that years ago, made a crusader; the other is a poet, who in olden days would have made a troubadour."

Then, as her daughter went away, Mrs. Audley said to herself:

"Which does she like, I wonder? Which does my darling like best?"

CHAPTER III.

WHICH SHALL BE THE HEIR.

EVERY one in the county knew Joycelyn Vernon, of Eastwold Park, first baronet of that name, one of the richest men in England, and certainly one of the most disagreeable. He had accumulated his money by speculations of the most daring kind ..

Twenty years before this story began he was a millionaire; since that time he had more than doubled his fortune, vet he was far from satisfied, he wanted more. An old, gray-haired man, fierce and violent in his manner, without one redeeming trait, a miser in his love for gold, yet lavish in his expenditure of it.

In his sixtieth year, having more money than he could ever, under any circumstances, know what do with, he purchased the estate of Eastwold, one of the finest in England. Why he was made a barenet no one ever knew; some suggested that it was because he had received a famous German prince in a right royal style, and had entertained him with the state due to a reigning monarch, and then he had been knighted. It must have been either for that reason, or because he had made so vast a fortune.

No sooner was this title secured to him and to his heirs than he began to feel a new ambition stirring within him: he must be the founder of a family-a great and noble family-the branches of which, like the branches of some fair tree, should spread over the land. Then he began to think of his heirs. He had loved his sister, a fairhaired girl who had married a London curate, and literally died for want of fresh air, leaving one son, Austin Chandos. He had hated his brother, a lieutenant in the regiment of the line who had died, leaving also a son, Cyri Leslie Vernon; and one of these two must succeed him-must inherit his vast wealth, his grand estate, and title; the question was, which? As he had loved the mother, so, also, he loved the son; and Austin Chandos stood by far the best chance.

He had sent to Oxford, where Austin was winning golden opinions from all who knew him, and had frankly explained why he desired his presence at Eastwold. Then he had summoned Cyril Leslie Vernon from Sandhurst, in talking over this halcyon time. and had exhained that his choice was to be made between them. He had made them both the same allowance: they both found more than sufficient occupation in the management of that vast estate. They liked each other; both were honorable and gifted, though each in different fashion. They had a suite of rooms each; Sir Joycelyn had presented each with a superb hunter; they each had their own hours, their ways and habits; one never interfered with the other; they were on terms of perfect friendliness until they both learned to love Lenore. Sir Joycelyn never said anything which could lead them to guess which would be his heir, and they did not trouble much about it. Once he called them into his room, and talked to them. He explained that many people had imagined he should leave his fortune equally divided between them.

"That I shall never do," he said; "one will have all, the other none; and which that one will be, depends entirely on the best compliance with my wishes."

They were both too young and too noble of heart to be mercenary. Sir Joycelyn's words had not made them worse friends. As they came from the library, Austin threw his arms carelessly round Cyril's neck.

"Which of us will be the millionaire, Cyril?" he asked. And the soldier's son answered:

" I shall be quite content which ever way it may be."

"We shall never quarrel over it,"

said Austin, with a laugh.

"Never," said Cyril; "I do not value money enough to quarrel over it. If it comes to me, Austin, you shall live with me and have the finest library in England. 1 will buy all the books that money can purchase; and when you write beautiful poems, they shall be printed in the most beautiful style,"

Austin laughed.

"I love poetry better than money," he said. " If the fortune comes to me, Cyril, I shall buy you a commission in the best regiment in England. Let it be which way it may, we shall never quarrel."

And with these words they shook hands. Money would never make the least difference between them-the love of woman might.

The three gentlemen, each one so different from the other, lived together in peace and harmony. Sir Joycelyn never visited; at stated intervals he gave a formal dinner party, to which gentlemen of high standing and positon were invited. Once or twice the beautiful grounds of Eastwold had been thrown open for a picnic or garden fete; but Sir Joycelyn did not care for the trouble of entertaining ladies, and, until the Greys came to Moulesmere, there was no lady whom he cared to entertain. Moulesmere was the estate adjoining his own, and the legend was, that in old feudal days the whole estate that in old feudal days the whole estate had been one. If it could be made one now, it would be, without exception, the finest in England, and that it should be one was the subject of Sir Joycelyn's dreams by night and his thoughts by

Squire Grey, of Moulesmere, had one daughter, who had been sent to Paris for her education, and was to return to England when it was completed. Rumor said that Miss Elsa Grey was a model of grace and elegance. The squire was always boasting of his daughter-how many languages she could speak, how many different styles of painting she understood. He had a jy5 photograph which seemed to be a representation of clouds of lace and quantities of ribbon, above which rose a face that bore an expression of great

"Wait until you see my daughter," he would say, when any one else was

The sqiure and Sir Joycelyn were excellent friends; they looked over the maps of their estates, and both agreed that the finest and grandest thing in the world would be to make the two

"The fact is," said Sir Joycelyn, "my heir must marry your heiress-then the thing is done."

Yes, that was the plan-Eastwold advance. and Moulesmere would be joined to-

"It will be like a little kingdom, said Sir Joycelyn, "and the owner of it will be richer by far than the sovereign of many a principality."

The squire and the baronet delighted

THE CHALYBEATE SPRIN

At Logy Bay, St. John's, Nfld.

Though mineral waters were known to exist at Logy Bay, for over a century, it remained for the enterprise of Mr. Thos. W. Spry to give them a commercial value. A reference is made to them in Jukes' Geographical Report, Vol II., page 13. "In Logy Bay," he says, "the thickbedded, dark sand-stones and conglomerates stand beldly and bare in round-topped hills and precipices 300 or 400 feet in height, with occasional fissures traversing their jagged cliffs, and the boiling waves of the Atlantic curling round their feet in white eddies, or clapping against their sides with huge sport of foam and spray. Just by Logy Bay is a mineral spring containing, among other things, a large proportion of iron in solution. At the period of our visit to the place, the scattered wooden huts were empty and deserted, and the fish-flakes and stages out of repair, as the people only reside here during the summer season."

The description of the huts, fish-flakes and stages would answer for the present day (July 5, 1888), and the wavesof the Atlantic still sport in curling foam against the adamantine rocks. They will "go on forever"; but Mr. Spry entertains the project of changing the huts, deserted fish-flakes and stages out of repair, into a flourishing watering place. He recently purchased a site from Mr. Matthew Pendergast, and has already erected commodious parlors for the accommodation of those who visit Logy Bay to partake of its healing waters. Logy Bay is not devoid of other attractions for those who love to see the rugged grandeur of our rock-bound coast. Red Head Point on the north of the bay is several hundred feet above the level of the ocean. On the left may be seen one of those rocks resembling steps of stairs, called trap rocks, supposed to be caused by the abrupt or sudden stopping of streams of lava flowing from a volcano. This we will call the giants' stairway. & On the north side of the bay is an opening which runs through the hill to Torbay Point, a distance of from half to threequarters of a mile. The canal or causeway is from four to six feet in width, and thirty feet in height. At high water it is navigable in a boat.

In the same neighborhood is another curiosity, which though not so remarkable as the one just mentioned, is nevertheless worthy of note. It is a hole from the top of the hill, or mountain, to a cave below which extends a short distance into the rock. Daylight may be seen peepin through it by looking up from the bottom of the cave. Knowing the skill of Mr. Spry as an advertiser we might be led to of the General Protestant Academy. suppose that he had these "wonders of nature" arranged in such close proximity to the mineral spring in order to attract visitors, and to make Logybay a watering place of world wide celebrity. But even a casual observer must see that the cost of making excavations like these would tax the resources of an Astor, a Vanderbilt or a Rotschild. They were probably "chiselled by the cunning hand of nature," or "dug out" by a mighty race of Bœthucks centuries ago.

There is one drawback to Logybay becoming a famous watering place, and that is the want of a beach for surf-bathing. Mr. Spry, however, hopes to be able to overcome this by having suitable bathing houses erected. If Mr. Spry's anticipations prove correct as to the medicinal properties of the spring, in a short while his enterprise will prove of no little advantage to the whole settlement of Logybay. On the properties of the waters we may quote the following, which we find in Tocque's "Wandering Thoughts," published in 1842, page 257-8:-SAMPLE OF SPRING WATER FROM NEWFOUNDLAND, Specific gravity, at 62 deg. Fahrt. 1,000,016.

solid contents in an imperial pint of 8,750	grains
Chloride of Calceum	·0419 ·0400 ·3984
4. Sulphate of Magnesia. 5. Sulphate of Soda 6. Carbonate of Magnesia	·0400 ·0713 ·0334
7. Silica	.1717
Decimals of a grain	9584

"It will be seen that the total solid contents of an imperial pint of this water does not weigh one grain; this is less than I ever met with in a water. They are common to all spring water, except the 1st, 8th, and 9th. The latter it is which will give a character to the spring. It is chalybeate to rather a greater extent than the waters of the 'King's Bath,' in Bath, England. (The King's Bath is the principal spring of the Bath waters.) The Newfoundland spring contains 45-1000ths of a grain in a pint; the Bath spring 30-1000ths; and the chloride of calceum (or muriate of lime when in the water) will contribute to the tonic effect of the iron, while the sulphates of soda and magnesia, although not in sufficient quantity to produce aperient effects, may prove enough to prevent the action which chalybeates have on some constitutions, Upon the whole, I should say that the water might be used with advantage as a general bracer, if arrangements could be made for the accommodation of invalids near the spring; for it must be remembered, that where iron is sustained in water by carbonic acid, as in this case, there is always a tendency for it to fall down as insoluble carbonate of iron, leaving the water without its chalybeate properties.

" WILLIAM HEREPATH. Mansion-House, Old Park, Bristol.

"The above analysis was obtained by his Excellency, Captain Prescott, the Governor, Dr. Kielley having previously informed him that the water contained some medicinal properties."

Mr. Spry sent 24 gallons, for analysis, to the Chemical and Meteorological Laboratory, 17 Bridge Road, London, in which George T. Holloway, F.C.S., presides. This is the result :-

"Water tasteless, odorless, and of slightly acid reaction, due to free carbonic acid. Viewed through two foot tube, pale yellow in color; shows reaction for iron without circulation. A careful analysis shows the following substances in solution:

Chloride of sodium, chloride of potassium, chloride of magnesium, chloride of calcium, sulphate of calcium, carbonate of iron, oxide of iron, phosphate of iron, carbonic acid, sulphuric acid, phosphoric acid, silica, manganese, alumina, arsenic.

The characteristic feature of the water is the presence of iron in the above forms, and also the chlorides, especially that of magnesia. All the others are also good."

The following is an analysis of three of the most celebrated mineral springs in the Old World. It will be seen that the properties which give these springs their value exist in "The Ocean View Chalybeate Spring, Logy Bay":-"I. FREDRICKSHALL—Sulphate of soda, sulphate of magnesia, chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, bromide of magnesium, sulphate of potash, sulphate of lime, carbonate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, silica and carbonic acid.

II. AFOLLINARIS—Carbonate of soda, carbonate of magnesia, carbonate of lime, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, oxide of iron, alumina, silica, carbonic acid.

III. Hanyadi Janos—Sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of soda, sulphate of potash, sulphate of lime, chloride of sodium, bi-carbonate of soda, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, carbonate of strontica, oxide of iron and alumini, carbonic acid and silica.

Hundreds of thousands of people visit these springs every year, and it is hoped now that the COLONIST makes the virtues of "The Ocean View Chalybeate Springs," known to the world, Logy Bay will attract visitors also from far and near.

The parlors erected at Logy Bay, will be under the charge of Mrs. F. C. Wills, daughter of an officer who fell at Isandula; and arrangements have been made to convey those who may desire to visit the spring. Teams for this purpose will leave the Atlantic Hotel daily during the summer

ARRIVAL OF THE SHOONER CAROLINE.

Captain Richard Mockler, in the coasting schr. 'Caroline," arrived from Witless Bay on Monday evening, and brought a good account of the fishery. During all last week, while the "Caroline" was at that port, boats with hook and line caught four to five quintals daily, and traps were taking about six quintals each day. Better work might be done, but for the fact, caplin are scare there. At Bay of Bulls, the reports were not so good, but the "Caroline" passed Mr. William Williams' boat on Saturday evening, off that port, which hailed for four quintals. The fishermen of Bay Bulls are for the most part engaged in the Bank fishery, and the shore fishery is herefore not so largely prosecuted as at Witless

DORY-BUILDING IN ST. JOHN'S

Mr. G. Herder, of the firm of Herder & Hallern has just returned form a trip to the United States, and boks the picture of good health. He visited Boston, Sallsbury, Newbury Port, Gloucester and Salem on business, more particularly the building of dories. He found that his firm have as good facilities to obtain pine, ash and oak as the manufacturers of the United States. Mr. Herder also found that inasmuch as the workmen employed here are as skilled, in this industry, as those abroad, dories can be manufactured in Newfoundland of a good quality, and as cheaply as any that can be imported. He points with just pride to the fact, that the dory which withstood the winds and the waves of the Atlantic, for twelve days (in which the Flemmings were saved), was built by Herder and Hallern. Since they commenced dory building about two years ago, they have turned out over one thousand. This is a proof of what live men can do in building up the industries of Newfoundland, and not only benefitting themselves but their country.

A Trip Around the Island.

We understand that it is the intention of His Excellency the Governor to leave St. John's about the 20 of July on an official visit to the more distant parts of his government. His Excellency proposes to go Southward, calling at Burin, Hr. Briton, Grand Bank, St. George's, Bonne Bay, &c., returning by the North-calling at Tilt Cove, Twillingate, Fogo, Bonavista and Trinity. We learn that H.M.S. Pylades has been detailed by the Admiral to convey His Excellency on his visit. We trust that pleasant weather may make the tour an enjoyable one .- Yesterday's

Downing of Mr. J. Garrett

Mr. John H. Garrett, P. E.I., (son of Mr. Geo. R. Garrett, well-known as a trader to this port), was drowned at Stanley Bridge, on the 4th inst. He and two boys, aged 10 and 12, started from the Bridge for the mouth of the harbor, a distance of four miles, to be in readiness for fishing this morning. When they got there the sea was running so high that Mr. Garrett decided to return immediately, On the boat being brought round she upset and filled with water. A farmer named Dunn saw the accident and put out in a boat and rescued the boys, who clung to the bottom of the boat, but Garrett was not to be seen and the boys say he only came to the surface once. Mr. Garrett leaves a wife and one child.

It was the year before last, not last year, that the "Shamrocks" beat the "Terra Novas," as we inadvertently stated yesterday. But the mistake does not detract anything from the fact that the statement made that the Terra Novas beat the Chamrocks the last two years is untrue, CARBONEAR NEWS.

A correspondent from Carbonear, vesterday, writes as follows : - " Several of our banking fleet have arrived to date, poorly fished-schrs. Raymond, 105 qtls.; Pet, 190; Dodd, 60; Snow Bird, 100; and Mary Young, Captain Connolly, 340 dry. The rain shower has been some thousands of dollars in potatoes and hay. Black grubs are destroying cabbage plants in vast numbers."

SOUR CRAPES.

The Halifax "Chronicle" of the 6th says :-"The business of getting Newfoundland into the confederation appears to advance very slowly. Hitherto the problem has been chiefly to get that province to come in, but now that there seems some prospect that this may be attained the best minds of Canada are worried over the question : "Will it pay to take it in?" On this point very much might be said, but we can afford to wait until matters assume a more definite phase."

A peculiar feature about the caplin which have struck in all round the neighboring beaches this year, is that they are nearly all of the female species. A waggish city barrister accounts for it by stating that this is leap year.

The steamer Curlew sailed for the Labrador and intermediate ports this morning. She took the following passengers: Mrs. Lindsay, Misses Tobin (2), Mills, Morris, Scapling, Foote, Messrs. Antle, Whitney, Barbour, Maddox, Watson, Curtan, Antle, Neil, and 4 in steerage.

The steamer Portia sails for New York and Halifax this evening, at 6 o'clock. She takes the following passengers: New York-Messrs. McGrath, Redfield, Forsyth; 5 in second cabin. Halifax-Mr. and Mrs. Chancey, Miss Narroway, Miss Neil, Dr. Williams, L. Chancey; 13 in 2nd cabin.

The steamer Curlew looked deeper than ever before steaming down the harbor this morning; this is owing to the large quantity of coal on board for the Labrador route. The tide being low in her dock this morning, her fore-foot stuck for some time, and she did not succeed in getting off till past eleven o'clock.

The banking schooner Jubilee, Capt. Nickerson, sails from Renews this evening for the banks with her second caplin baiting. She has landed twelve hundred and eighty quintals to date, which puts her near, if not actually, at the head of the bank fishery record for the season. Captain N. will not take a large caplin baiting as he anticipates getting squid on the banks.
