1. FOREWORD

This checklist of the land mammals of Tanganyika Territory by Messrs. Swynnerton and Hayman will be welcomed by all who are interested in East African faunas, and will be especially valuable to zoologists.

Such a checklist, carefully compiled, has long been needed and it is to be hoped that comparable lists for Kenya and Uganda will be prepared in the not too distant future.

This checklist with its carefully compiled data showing the known distribution of each form is of particular interest because mammals of Africa play such an important role in so many branches of economic research today.

The value of the present paper has been greatly enhanced by the diligence and extreme care with which Mr. Swynnerton has checked all the available data, not only from published works but in many Museums.

So many of the diseases which affect both man and his domestic animals can be linked in one way or another with the indigenous mammalian faunas, that it is vital to research workers in fields other than mammalogy to have access to good records of the distribution of the many genera and species.

It is unfortunately only too true that the opening up of the country economically, by such means as the vast clearing for groundnuts and bush clearing and game reduction for Tsetse control, probably foreshadows the doom of many animals, except in special reserves and National Parks, while nature, too, is playing its part in this respect as witness to the virtual extinction of the Hippopotamus in the Rukwa basin during a recent drought.

Now that an up-to-date checklist of Tanganyika land mammals has been made available it is to be hoped that numerous observers will be stimulated to collect more data, not only on distribution, but still more on habits, local migrations and breeding rates, etc.

The East African Natural History Society is delighted to have been able to assist in publishing this most valuable paper and will be only too glad to offer its pages to persons who can extend the value of this paper by additional information.

2. INTRODUCTION

The publication in 1939 of G. M. Allen's comprehensive Checklist of African Mammals provided zoologists and others concerned with the mammalian fauna of the continent with an invaluable reference work. With its classified list of all the technical names applied from Linnæus (1758) down to 1938, it has simplified very greatly the work of mammalogists and has proved an indispensable starting point for further investigations.

The present Checklist of the recorded mammals of Tanganyika Territory and the adjacent Zanzibar Protectorate is offered in the belief that fuller separate lists for each main division of the continent, expanded by the addition of recorded localities for each species, may help to draw attention, within each territory, to the rich mammalian fauna, and stimulate local interest with the object of filling in the numerous gaps in the published information on status, distribution, etc. It is also hoped that other workers in the biological field, such as agriculturists, medical entomologists, pest control workers, and so on, who not infrequently have occasion to refer to the local mammals in the course of their investigations, may find such a list of some value. A further point is that the modern developments now changing or threatening to change, so much of the surface of Africa, are bound to have a serious effect on the fauna and flora, and the mammalian population, in particular, is likely to suffer great changes in numbers and status. Conservation measures will be unlikely to have much effect except in those areas set aside as reserves or national parks, where, it is to be hoped, the hand of "progress" will not be welcomed. In all other areas the easy access by mechanical transport, the increase and shifting of native populations, the large-scale agricultural developments now in progress and not least, the long-term possibilities of opening up to domestic stock, through the scientific developments leading to the control of nagana, immense areas of virgin bush, are all factors that are likely to give a present-day list of the mammals and their distribution a historical value before many years have passed.

There has been only one previous attempt to list the Tanganyika mammals, and that was over fifty years ago. In 1895 Matschie published an account of the mammalian fauna as then known, with descriptions and notes on habits, which, though useful at the time, was necessarily sketchy in places owing to the inadequate exploration of the country at that time. Although it is true to say that there are still parts of Tanganyika unexplored zoologically, the progress made since 1895 is illustrated by a comparison of Matschie's total of some 166 forms with the 437 recorded in the present work. Although it does not seem likely that any striking discoveries remain to be made in the area under review, there is every reason to expect that closer investigation will add to the range of the known forms, will reveal further local races of established species, and will add to the Tanganyika list some forms found hitherto only over the border in the adjacent territories.

From the early travellers and naturalists, among whom Stuhlmann and Emin did pioneer work, down to the present day, there have been many who have added their quota of knowledge to the accumulating store of information on which local faunas, and eventually general natural histories, are based. Of living persons, none has contributed more to our knowledge than Arthur Loveridge whose many collecting expeditions during the past thirty-five years have filled in numerous gaps.

The general system of classification adopted here is that proposed by Simpson (1945) down to genera, while Allen (1939) has been followed in most cases for the species and subspecies. An exception is made in the case of Rodents where we have followed the recent work of Ellerman (1940, 1941, 1950). There has been no attempt to provide a systematic revision of any group, however desirable such a revision might be; such work would be outside the scope of this list. In a few particular instances we have not adhered to the authorities quoted in their usage of certain names, mainly because of a wish to avoid introducing confusion among readers who may be familiar with long-established scientific names. An instance is Simpson's use of the generic name Strepsiceros to include not only the Kudus but (possibly as subgenera) Tragelaphus (Bushbucks) and Limnotragus (Sitatungas). In this case we have thought it less confusing to continue to use the well-established names Tragelaphus and Limnotragus as full genera.

In its arrangement the present work falls into three sections. The first and major part is the list of recorded names. Under the headings of Orders, Families and Genera the scientific name of each form is given, together with its author and a reference to the original publication in which it was described. All these original references have been checked during the preparation of this paper. Although the original references to nearly all the forms quoted may be found in Allen (1939), they are given here for the sake of completeness and to assist those who are unable to refer to Allen's work. While checking references, full use has been made of the MS notes added to many of the books in the libraries of the British Museum (Natural History) giving the results of Sherborn's, and others', researches into the dates of publication of these works or of the parts of which they are composed. The abbreviations used for scientific periodicals follow those given in the World List of Scientific Periodicals (ed. 2, 1934). Synonyms, which would add greatly to the bulk of the work without forming a corresponding addition to its usefulness, are not given here except in those few instances where we differ from Allen, Ellerman, or Simpson.

In deciding to which author any particular scientific name should be credited we have followed the dictates of custom rather than adhering strictly to the Rules of Zoological Nomenclature. For instance, we have followed most current authors in creating certain names to Brisson (1762) and Oken (1816), and in considering the use of these names by these authors as valid. Hopwood (1947: 533) and Hershkovitz (1949: 289) have proposed respectively that generic names first used by Brisson in the second edition of his Regnum Animale (1762), and by Oken in his Lehrbuch der Naturgeschichte (1816) are non-Linnaean and therefore not available. It would appear best to refer the question of the validity or otherwise of names appearing in these two works to the International Commission of Zoological Nomenclature for their ruling.

Wherever possible, English and/or Kiswahili names are also given.

The type-locality of each form is given after its name and reference. In the case of Tanganyika localities the details of latitude and longitude are not given in the text since they are included in the gazetteer at the end. In the case of type-localities outside Tanganyika full details of latitude, longitude and altitude are given where possible.

Records of occurrence are listed by Districts, a comma separating localities within the same District, and a semicolon separating localities in different Districts. These records of occurrence are compiled from three main sources: (1) published records in the literature, (2) British Museum (Natural History) records of specimens in the collection, (3) personally collected data. It is hoped that the publication of these occurrence records, inadequate as they may be in many cases, may lead to the local gaps in our knowledge being filled by fresh investigation.

Species and subspecies which have been introduced under domestication are included in the list but are distinguished from the indigenous fauna by being shown enclosed in parentheses. Any taxonomic notes necessary are given as footnotes.

The second part of the work, the bibliography, consists of a list of all the papers and books dealing with Tanganyika mammals, either directly or indirectly, consulted during the preparation of this work, or of importance in relation to the systematics or distribution of some of the groups under discussion.

The concluding part of the work, the gazetteer, contains an alphabetical list of all the Tanganyika localities mentioned in the Checklist. The name of each locality is followed by the political District in which it occurs, altitude to the nearest hundred feet (usually), and the latitude and longitude. Where a locality is situated on a mountain the name of the mountain is also given. The quotation of latitude and longitude is considered of more importance than the name of the political District since the boundaries and even the names of the latter are not infrequently changed, and in any case many localities are so obscure that exact fixing of their position is only possible by citing latitude and longitude.

We are indebted to various helpers who have given us records of occurrence, in particular Dr. C. H. N. Jackson and Messrs. C. J. P. Ionides and B. Cooper; and to Mrs. L. R. Swynnerton and Mrs. S. N. Hannam for assistance during the preparation of this paper. We also acknowledge our indebtedness to the staffs of the Mammal Room and the General and Zoological Libraries of the British Museum (Natural History), and the Radcliffe Science Library at Oxford, for guidance while unravelling several taxonomic problems and assistance in tracing many obscure references in old books and periodicals.

* Roberts (1944: 238) has pointed out that Smith, in his original description of Macroscelides brachyrhynchus (1836, Rpt Exp. C. Afr., p. 42, June), omitted an "h" and spelt the trivial word "brachyrhynchus," and Roberts has proposed that this spelling should be retained. However, Article 19 of the International Rules of Zoological Nomenclature says: "The original orthography of a name is to be preserved unless an error of transcription, a lapsus calami, or a typographical error is evident." It is suggested that the original spelling "brachyryncus" is either a lapsus calami or a typographical error and that "brachyrhynchus" was intended and should be used. This will entail no change in current usage. It may be noted that Dr. Smith spelt the name correctly (that is "brachyrhynchus") in the title to Plate 13 of his Illustrations of the Zoology of South Africa (1839), but dropped the "h" in the accompanying text.

Genus RHYNCHOCYON Peters.

1847. Rhynchocyon Peters, Ber. Verh. preuss. Akad. Wiss., Berl. 1847: 36, Feb. Genotype, by monotypy, Rhynchocyon cirnei Peters.

* Kershaw, in his original description of E. renatus, gave the position of Gwao's as "30° 40' E., 4° 25' S.," which is incorrect by some 300 miles. Ikungi, which is the name of the late Jumbe Gwao's village, lies at 5° 7' S., 34° 47' E.

† Specimens from this locality were recorded by G. M. Allen and Loveridge (1933: 55) as P. matschiei venustus Thomas (1903, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 12: 339, Sept.; Namwiwe, 4,000 feet, near Nabitawa, northern Nyasaland, ca 10° S., 33° E.). Unyang'anyi is only sixty miles west of Barungi, the type-locality of P.t. matschiei, and it seems much more likely, if only on geographical grounds, that these specimens are referable to the latter form than to P.t. venustus, whose type-locality lies more than 350 miles to the south.

Subgenus RHYNCHOCYON Peters
Chequered Elephant Shrews.

RHYNCHOCYON CIRNEI HENDERSONI Thomas. Nyasaland Chequered Elephant Shrew.

1902. Rhynchocyon hendersoni Thomas, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 10: 403, Nov. Nyika Plateau, probably near Livingstonia, west of Lake Nyasa, northern Nyasaland [between 10° and 11° S., 33° 40' and 34° 10' E., 6,000 to 8,700 feet] [fide Allen and Loveridge, 1933: 53].

Records.—Dabaga, Iringa, Kigogo; Nkuka Forest.

RHYNCHOCYON CIRNEI MACRURUS Günther. Kirk's Chequered Elephant Shrew.

1881. Rhynchocyon macrurus Günther. Proc. zool. Soc. Lond. 1881: 163, June. Rovuma River east of 38° 45' E., boundary between Tanganyika Territory and Portuguese East Africa.

Records.—“The forest country of Kilwa, Liwale (Liwale, Murembwi River), Lindi, Mikindani (Kitaya), Newala, Masasi, Tunduru and Songea Districts” [C. J. P. Ionides, in litt.].

RHYNCHOCYON CIRNEI SWYNNERTONI Kershaw. Swynnerton's Chequered Elephant Shrew.

1923. Rhynchocyon swynnertoni Kershaw, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 11: 587, May. Kipera, Kilosa District, Tanganyika Territory.

Record.—Known only from the type-locality.

Subgenus RHINONAX Thomas. Black-and-red Elephant Shrews.

1918. Rhinonax Thomas, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 1: 370, May. As a subgenus of Rhynchocyon Peters; type, by original designation, Rhynchocyon chrysopygus Günther.

RHYNCHOCYON PETERSI PETERSI Bocage. Peter's Black-and-red Elephant Shrew.

1880. Rhynchocyon Petersi Bocage, J. Sci. math. phys. nat. Lisboa 7: 159, pl. 4, f. 2, Feb. Coast of East Africa, probably opposite Zanzibar Island [fide Dollman, 1912, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 10: 131, July].

1900. Rhynchocyon petersi fischeri Neumann, Zool. Jb., Syst. 13: 543, 10 Oct. Uziguia, between 5° 20' and 5° 30' S., and between 37° 50' and 38° 40' E., north-eastern Tanganyika Territory.

* G. M. Allen (1939: 161) has recommended that P. anubis (J. B. Fischer, 1829, Synop. Mammal., p. 33; upper Nile) should be dropped in favour of P. doguera (Pucheran, 1856, *Rev. Mag. * Recorded by G. M. Allen and Loveridge (1933: 98) as P.c. quotus Wroughton (1909, Ann. Mag. nat. Hist. 3: 516, June; near the Dikulwe River, Katanga, Belgian Congo) but, on geographical grounds, specimens from south-western Tanganyika are probably referable to P.c. yulei (Thomas) whose type-locality is intermediate between that of P.c. quotus and the localities listed above.

† P.c. yulei was founded on a specimen which came in a collection of mammals from northern Nyasaland, north-eastern Northern Rhodesia and the Lake Mweru area. On the original label attached to the type-specimen the collector entered "Mwezo" as the locality at which the squirrel was obtained, and to this Thomas added "near Lake Mweru;" this is generally quoted as the type-locality of P.c. yulei. However, no "Mwezo" can be traced in the neighbourhood of Lake Mweru and it is suggested that the locality is, in fact, Mwenzo, a mission station on the old Stevenson Road between Lake Nyasa and the south end of Lake Tanganyika, and within the area from which the collection came. Mwenzo lies just inside Northern Rhodesia.

Afr.*, p. 43; "the country between the Orange River and the Tropic" of Capricorn, South Africa). However, in view of the long-standing use of the name coucha for these rats, and in order to avoid confusion, this name is retained here. It is felt that a good case could be made out for suspending the Rules in favour of the more widely and commonly used Rattus coucha (A. Smith). Roberts (1944: 239) considered R. coucha (A. Smith) to be a synonym of R. marikquensis (A. Smith).

The following seven species and subspecies of Pygmy Mice are often placed in the genus Leggada Gray. Thomas (1919: 419) considered that Mus and Leggada "are really distinct natural groups which it would be both convenient and true to nature to recognise as separate." Miller (1912: 863) has pointed out that there are no characters which distinguish Leggada from Mus, and this view is shared by Ellerman (1941: 240) and Hill and Carter (1941: 85). We incline to the latter view and regard Leggada as a strict synonym of Mus.

* Geographically this record, given by G. M. Allen and Loveridge (1933: 114), should be referred to L.s. manteufeli whose type-locality is intermediate between that of L.s. ansorgei and Madehani. It may be, however, as suggested by Allen and Loveridge (loc. cit.), that manteufeli is a synonym of ansorgei and it is perhaps best to record the identification given by those who examined the material until such a time as the relationship of these two races is worked out.

† Perhaps better classed as a member of the subfamily Dendromurinae [fide Simpson, 1945: 208].

‡ We have followed Ellerman's (1941: 286) grouping of the members of this genus under one species rather than Hatt's (1940b: 493) subdivision of the genus into three species.

* Shortly before going to press we located a copy of Bohmann's (1942) revision of the genus Dendromus A. Smith. We do not agree with some of Bohmann's conclusions and have decided not to adopt his arrangement of the genus until we have had more time to examine it in detail.

† Shortridge (1942: 90) treats D. pumilio (Wagner) as a subspecies of D. mesomelas (Brants, 1827, Het Geslacht des Muizen, p. 122; near Zondags (Sunday's) River, eastern Cape Province, South Africa).

* Cuvier mentioned no specific names in connection with his new genus Otomys and it would appear to be a genus caelebs. The use of the word on p. 168 is probably vernacular, while plate 60 has no title though it is thought to portray the teeth of the animal later named Euryotis irrorata by Brants. However, we are retaining it as a valid name for the members of this group on account of its long usage and general acceptance.

* This reference to the genus Atilax has been the subject of much discussion. Cuvier mentioned no technical trivial name, referring only to the "Vansire" and Atilax Cuvier would appear to be a genus caelobs. However, J. A. Allen (1924: 167-173) has examined the matter at some length and has come to the conclusion that Cuvier's use of the generic name Atilax is valid and should be used. We have followed Allen's recommendation.

* Opinion No. 152 of the International Commission on Zoological Nomenclature rules that generic names introduced by Meigen, 1800, in his Nouvelle Classification des Mouches à deux ailes are available. However, Crocuta—which appears on page 39—is not generally recognised by entomologists. On the other hand, dating from Kaup, 1828, it is the generic name commonly used for the Spotted Hyaenas and it is suggested that, by suspension of the Rules, it should be retained as a nomen conservandum for this group.

Subfamily ACINONYCHINAE Pocock.

Genus ACINONYX Brookes. Cheetahs.

1828. Acinonyx Brookes, Cat. Anat. Zool. Mus. Joshua Brookes, pp. 16, 33. Genotype, by monotypy, Acinonyx venator Brookes = Felis venatica H. * We have followed Pocock (1932: 543) in using the name P.p. fusca (F. A. A. Meyer) for the Tanganyika leopards. Allen (1939: 244) must have misread Pocock when he states that "the implication is that the Indian and East African leopards in turn are not different from typical pardus." Pocock (op. cit., p. 590), under his "Summary of the Races admitted in this paper," lists fusca (No. 7) and pardus (No. 9) as separate subspecies of Panthera pardus (Linnaeus).

† Three very doubtfully distinct races of Acinonyx jubatus, viz. A.j. ngorongorensis Hilzheimer, A.j. velox and A.j. raineyi Heller, have been described from East Africa. We do not think that the East African cheetah deserves subspecific differentiation from the typical form of South Africa any more than that there are three distinct races of cheetahs in East Africa, but, should a separate name be required, one of the above is available. All three names were published in 1913; velox and raineyi—of which the former has page priority—were described in the same paper, published 8 November, but whether this paper appeared before that containing Hilzheimer's description of ngorongorensis is questionable. It probably did not. The original description of ngorongorensis appeared in a part of the Sitzungsberichte Gesellschaft naturforschende Freunde, Berlin, dealing with the May and June meetings of that Society, but there is nothing to indicate the actual date of publication. Unfortunately, the General Library of the British Museum (Natural History) can throw no further light on this. It is known, however, that Parts 5-6 (May-June)—containing Hilzheimer's paper—and 7-8 (July-October) all reached London on 20 December, 1913. It is suggested that the Berlin people kept back the earlier parts to send all together, and it seems reasonable to assume that the May-June parts came out well in advance of 8 November; in other words, that ngorongorensis was published before velox and raineyi. Hollister (1918: 151) confirms this conclusion when he says that ngorongorensis "has priority over raineyi."

With the small amount of material available for comparison it is impossible to say how many, if any, of the above forms are valid, or whether the Tanganyika Aard-vark is distinct from the typical South African race.

Distribution.—Widespread in suitable localities. Being strictly nocturnal, aard-varks are rarely seen.

* Agassiz (1842, Nomenclator Zool., Mamm., p. 23) gave as the first reference to Orycterus "E. Geoffroy, 1795, Décade philosophique," and G. M. Allen (1939: 270) and most other authors quote this as the earliest reference to the genus. However, Sherborn (1902: 701) said against this: "I cannot find this entry," and ascribed the genus to Lacepède, 1799; later (1922-32: 4635), he ascribed it to G. Cuvier, 1798. We have examined "La Décade philosophique, littéraire et politique" in the British Museum and can find no reference to "Orycterus E. Geoffroy." This reference should henceforth be dropped and the genus ascribed to G. Cuvier, 1798.

† Though dated 1796, this work does not appear to have been published until 1803.

† The type-locality given in the original was "Mutjekgebirge, 2,000 metres," which is shown on old maps as the high country west of the north end of Lake Manyara as far west as the Crater Highlands. The name "Mutjek," of Masai origin, has long since fallen into disuse. The reference to "Gebirge" in the original indicates that the type of H. schulzi was collected in the Crater Highlands and this is confirmed by the altitude "2,000 metres;" Forest Hogs are known to occur in the bamboo forests high up on Mt. Oldeani, the southernmost peak of the Crater Highlands, and this may be fixed as the type-locality of H. schulzi Zukowsky.
