My dear friend

You were most kind to write and assure me of your physical well-being. You are so constantly in my mind that the other interests of life seem remote to me - still the first thought on waking, and the last at night goes you-ward.

unbidden, and I sometimes wonder if our dear absent one is thinking of me as one who might in some way serve her dearest one.

Perhaps with her clear spiritual vision she divines the quality of the love you inspired in me from the first meeting, and which has but deepened with every meeting, till it is too sweet and sacred to Speak about - men to you.

I mention it that you may feel that you are doing me a favor when you think of anything I could do for you.

I want to beg you to come to us at any time, if you are called to the city during the summer, and to let me meet you at station.

We have plenty of room to make you comfortable as well as welcome, for a stay of any length of time.

My sister has gone for a few days visit to Worcester
- and I have had two days
with a friend who has just returned from a year of music in Vienna.

We are all well, and all
hold you in affectionate remembrance.

Ever faithfully yours.
Mahalia R. Hodder.
