Dr. Willett Discovers Russian Schools Authoritarian Oriented

By VICKI BOWLING

"Even though you realize that your own country is not perfect, you come back with a greater appreciation of it." This was the observation of Dr. Willett concerning his recent trip to Russia.

Dr. Willett spent eight days in Moscow and Novosibirsk, which is in central Siberia. He said he saw some things he hadn't expected to see.

The people are reportedly taking young boys and girls from the villages to fight for them.

Lynn Coleman Represents Longwood In Apple Festival

By SHEILAH MARTIN

Lynn Coleman, a senior in Alpha Gamma Delta Social Sorority, has been selected by a committee consisting of students, faculty members, and administration, to represent Longwood in the annual Apple Blossom Festival being held in Winchester, Virginia, May 6-8.

Lynn will be one of 20 princesses representing various colleges and universities throughout the state presiding at the festival. The students were recognized because of their outstanding achievement in scholarship, leadership, and service to Longwood College. Geist feels that these girls have tried to promote college loyalty and to preserve the ideals of the institution. They have at the same time built an understanding between students and faculty. Those tagged were: Frankie Brown, Patti Coogan, Sally Foster, Donna Gibson, Jody Mace, Margaret Webb, Jo Brown, Lois Hubrick, Martha Marchese, Amelia Nespoli and Kay Powell.

FRANKIE BROWN

Frankie Brown is an English major from Waynesboro. Frankie was a member of Legislative Board her freshman and sophomore years, and was co-chairman of the junior red and whites during Oktoberfest. She was secretary of the Colleagues between students and faculty. Those tapped were: Frankie Brown, Patti Coogan, Sally Foster, Donna Gibson, Jody Mace, Margaret Webb, Jo Brown, Lois Hubrick, Martha Marchese, Amelia Nespoli and Kay Powell.

Dr. Willett pointed out, "and Lenin is the savior." The dedication to Lenin is unbelievable, Dr. Willett said. His picture is everywhere. The lines to see his body are tremendous. Visitors are allowed to go to the front, otherwise, they are waiting in line for six hours. Stalin is virtually ignored.

The government is very strict on visitors. Dr. Willett gave reasons why. The 24th Congress is getting ready to meet, and the government is tense about the situation. There is also some feeling of distrast, particularly on the part of the intellectuals. The government is cracking down on the intellectuals. It has imposed a strict limit on literature brought in by visitors, particularly westerners. Technical publications, however, are allowed.

A guide from the official Russian agency was constantly with the group. What the group was supposed to know was that there was a second guide, seemingly inconspicuous. This second guide was a check on the first, making sure that the first did not say or do anything out of line. It was quite obvious, however, who our second guide was," Dr. Willett grinned. "We even took pictures of him."

The news telecasts were depressing, he admitted. They are all communist-minded, with no real news of the world.

Daily news sheets are printed by the American Embassy. A member of the group picked up copies everyday. Otherwise, Dr. Willett said, they would not have
Administrative Clean-Up

A Thoughtful Stand

Should students have any voice in the dismissal of professors?

Although there are mixed reactions among the student body at Longwood the most prevalent feeling seems to be that since they are students they are directly affected that, yes, they should have some say as to "who gets the hatchet.'"

How would the student have a voice in this area of academic policy?

It has been suggested that a joint student and faculty assembly would be formed which would be able to recommend directly to the president and the Board of Visitors. It could become a recorded policy that the Board of Visitors would solicit recommendations by the student Faculty Assembly upon any matter directly affecting faculty interests and on all matters of academic policy. This committee, it has been suggested, would be responsible for such things as seeing that there is no general discrimination against young applicants for faculty positions and that a college-wide formal student evaluation of faculty be held every two or three years.

This idea of a joint student-faculty assembly has begun to gain wide support. The main argument supporting such a plan is that in the present system the academic freedoms of students are being infringed upon. Students feel that since the administration "hires" in their best interest" that they are the ones which should be consulted in the matter. If the question of faculty dismissal is, as many say, a question of student academic freedom, then perhaps Longwood does need a joint Student Faculty assembly. It might be worth looking into.

In the week just returned from spring vacation, there have been many rumors around the campus concerning the discontinuation of several majors which are no longer offered by Longwood. The rumors were contradicting and declared that anything from specific classes to entire departments were being eliminated. In order to clarify what will happen at registration, I spoke with Mr. Ben Sandidge, about the future of the German Department, the one most often mentioned.

Mr. Sandidge said he has been informed by the administration because of low enrollment and "trying to economize," he is considering eliminating the German major from the curriculum. So definite a decision has not been made yet, but Mr. Sandidge has been given a contract which terminates at the end of next year. Meanwhile, Longwood will be looking for an instructor who can teach another language as well as German.

Should German be dropped, only those classes required for a general degree will be taught. When asked if a program similar to that used with Greek and Latin students could be set up, Mr. Sandidge replied: "We feel they don't offer enough at Hampden-Sydney" to qualify a student for a degree in German. Mr. Sandidge is most concerned as to what will happen at registration. If students think they will not be able to complete their German department, they will not sign up for any of the classes. Since the file of this, and any other department in danger, will depend on registration figures, it is imperative that students sign up for these classes to keep them from being cancelled.

The controversy over the fates of the departments involved raises questions concerning what sort of system of priorities Longwood should follow. Should a college discontinue parts of its curriculum and yet continue to increase the number of buildings it constructs?

Longwood has been emphasizing in recent years that it is a liberal arts college and not specifically a teacher-training institute. However, it does not appear to be logical to cease offering classes when such a move can only make a curriculum, which is already over a third degree in General Education, broader in scope. Longwood is a small school and for the future and will only be suited for educating teachers for the Commonwealth of Virginia. While I would never dispute the importance of elementary education, I would like to see education of students in Longwood followed. The logical solution would be for Longwood to stop expanding and to begin conserving in other areas until it can afford to support both the necessary curriculum and expansion. To follow any other procedure can only be detrimental to Longwood College in the future.

Source of those are a part of the college community, too.

In the future, perhaps the College Board could be selected because they have been done in school activities and the blue and white spirit they have shown throughout the year. This way Colleagues would be a true representation of the student body.

Fairness?

When students register for classes, they are only allowed to know the time and place the class meets. Therefore, they are no choice as to what professor they get. We do P.T.O. and go by hours and therefore, it would seem that the student should be able to get the teacher he prefers providing there is space and he can fit it into his schedule.

Secondly, it is fair that the students, faculty, and administration have a common interest in which they can see if the professors are living up to their responsibilities more than the blue and white spirit. The blue and white spirit is manifested differently in each individual, therefore the Colleagues should be a cross-section of these individuals. We are not all security instructors, nor are we all top achievers in the department of physical education, and, the result, I believe our students have this right to the know that the best of are a part of the college community, too.

Opening today in the Bedford Gallery is an exhibit of craft works done by graduate students of Virginia Commonwealth University. The show continues through April 27 and may be seen during the regular Bedford Building hours.

Weavings which include wall hangings and clothes are rich in color, variety, and style. Hand-somely designed and crafted wood furniture adds a new dimension to the show. Fine and delicate jewelry is contrasted to the bold and earthy forms of ceramics displayed.

The artists are students of Regina Medley and Geff Reed, both of whose works have been exhibited at Longwood. The show is a beautiful example of creativity and craftsmanship combined to provide a rewarding visual and tactile experience.

Student Teaching Experiences Rewarding

"Students who complete student teaching with a grade below "C" are not recommended for certification as teachers," reads the Student Teacher's Handbook— the law book for those preparing to begin the unique experience of student teaching.

With the recent return of last block's student teachers, it was thought a random poll of the "lucky ones" would reveal much about the advantages and disadvantages of their experiences.

"Sometimes the demerit system would be the only thing that worked. Some kids would only behave after being threatened by or receiving a demerit," one student teacher aid. "I hated having to resort to the demerit, though."

Other student teachers felt the demerit system was wrong and would not bestow demerits.

"I couldn't see how suspending a student from school would help him. Often the slow learners or the repeaters were the ones given the demerits, and suspending these kids from school would not make their behavior improve, but make them more bitter and apt to cause trouble."

Another returning Longwood girl told how receiving demerits sometimes became the symbol of status. "One boy openly bragged about getting over 400 demerits in a single year," she said.

"I had one class of only repeaters," one girl began. "Some of these kids worked at night and didn't get home until late and then didn't feel the need to do homework. I had to find something that would interest these kids on their own level—that would keep them awake. I used a lot of current issues units in that class."

"Sure, I had a couple of kids who slept in every one of my classes. What did I do? I let them sleep, I figured their sleep was more important," another girl said.

"There were those who disagreed with this theory, however. "I felt I had to wake these sleepers to be fair to the rest of the class. Sleep and boredom tend to be contagious, you know."

"Other girls told of how they treated students who refused to work. Some kids would only be-"treated students who refused to work. Some kids would only be-

English Lacrosse Coach Instructs Longwood's Team

Mrs. Elaine Taylor, of Deserl, England, was the visiting coach for the LC Lacrosse Team at a clinic held here this past weekend. She was selected as the visiting coach because in the past six years, while serving as a teacher and lacrosse coach in a selective type of grammar school, her lacrosse team has won the national lacrosse title four years.

While here at Longwood, Mrs. Taylor worked with sixteen girls on basic skills of cradling, pivoting, passing, catching, picking up the ball, and cutting and creating a space.

Mrs. Taylor spoke highly of other girls that the various colleges so far. "It has been a great honor for me to serve as a visiting coach. The friendliness and kindness has been overwhelming. By the enthusiasm of the coaches and students, I know that lacrosse will come to be a popular sport in the United States," she commented.

Mrs. Taylor has been in the United States for two weeks and plans to spend at least another two weeks visiting colleges throughout the state.

You've dreamed about your diamond engagement ring a dozen times. But now that you know it's for keeps, it's time to stop dreaming and start learning about diamonds and their value.

Because no two diamonds are exactly alike, jewellers have adopted exacting standards to determine the relative value of each and every diamond in the world. These standards include a diamond's size (carat weight), color, cut and clarity.

COLOR: Fine white diamonds are quite rare and valued accordingly. Other shades in relative order of their worth are: blue, yellow, brown and black.

CUT: The cut of a diamond—the facets placed on it by a trained cutter—brings out the gems fire and brilliance. Anything less than correct cut reduces beauty, brilliance and value.

CLARITY: Determined by the absence of small imperfections. A perfect diamond has no imperfections when examined under two power magnification by a trained eye.

CARAT: A diamond's size is measured in carats. As a diamond increases in size, its price will increase even more if the quality remains constant. But larger diamonds of inferior quality may actually be worth less than smaller, prettier diamonds.

Although it's important to know the facts about diamonds, you certainly don't have to be an expert to choose a Keepsake Diamond Ring. In fact, Keepsake guarantees a diamond of fair-white color, correct cut and perfect clarity in replacement assurance. The fair-white Keepsake certificate provides permanent registration, trade-in value and protection against loss of diamonds from the setting.

Committee Votes To Extend Course Withdrawal Period

The Academic Policies Committee recently decided to change the procedure for withdrawing from classes. A student will be able to drop a course any time within the first six weeks of the semester.

In the past, withdrawals had to be made before the end of the first two weeks of the semester. If a student dropped a course after this time she received an automatic F in the class. Under the new system if a student withdraws from the college or from a course within the allotted six weeks, she will receive a grade of W (withdrawal) instead of WF (withdrawal failing).

The committee does not feel that this change will interfere with the academic quality of any course. It will merely enable the student to adequately evaluate her choice of courses. The change will be included in the next catalog.

Applications Available For Student And Resident Assistants

By KATHY ROBERTSON

Application forms for the positions of Resident Assistant and Student Assistant will be available later this month. Any student interested in being a Resident Assistant should contact the Office of the Associate Dean of Students. Forms will be available in the dorms for freshmen and sophomores who wish to sign up as Student Assistants.

A Resident Assistant, formally known as Resident Counselor, is a student who resides in a freshman dormitory and serves as a counselor for a group of freshman students. Each resident counselor devotes 10 to 15 hours each week to her counseling duties. The salary is $55.50 per month.

Resident Assistants are selected on the basis of their qualifications for counseling and advising. They should be observant of problems, understanding, cooperative, willing to take initiative in talking to students, sympathetic to problems existing in dormitories, and able to devote time and energy to the execution of their duties.

During Orientation Week Student Assistants are busy meeting all the new freshmen. The Student Assistant is a person who is anxious to help the freshmen feel at home at Longwood, to show them around, and listen to their problems, and to help them in any way possible to adjust to college life. Student Assistants are members of the sophomore and junior class recommended by classmates, Hea Deans, Residents, and Instructors. Students may also indicate they are interested in being Student Assistants.
