Preface

This e-document aims at providing the basic bibliographical sources for Buddhist studies mainly approached from a philological viewpoint. It is, therefore, not meant to be a comprehensive bibliography of Buddhist studies in general but rather a systematic guide to bibliographical works on traditional Buddhist literature. In my survey, I have attempted to cover all relevant bibliographical sources regardless of their language and place of publication. Needless to say, however, the endeavor has been hampered by my limited knowledge of the field as well as of the spectrum of languages in which Buddhist studies have been undertaken.

The development of Buddhist studies has resulted not only in an impressive expansion and subdivision of the entire field but also an increase in the number of books and articles in various languages of the world. It is thus increasingly difficult to know what works have been published, or are now being undertaken, on a particular text or topic. In this sense, electronic databases of articles like INBUDS<sup>[1]</sup> and SARDS<sup>[2]</sup> have been of great assistance in gathering bibliographical references on relevant studies. The former site, however, is limited as to the country of publication while the latter in respect to geographical area. Moreover, researchers also need bibliographical information about relevant books, chapters, and short notices which are found in a large array of publications.

Detailed bibliographical works of any type will continue to play a very important role in supporting the desideratum of comprehensive research. It is, therefore, most regrettable that no new volumes from the excellent bibliographical series of the 梵語仏典の研究 [Bongo butten no kenkyū] (A descriptive bibliography of the Sanskrit Buddhist literature)<sup>[3]</sup> or of the Systematische Übersicht über die buddhistische Sanskrit-Literatur<sup>[4]</sup> have been published in this century. Only Volume Two of the latter series is available as a periodically updated online source under the title of Systematischer Überblick über die Literatur der erkenntnistheoretisch-logischen Schule des Buddhismus (SUEBS)<sup>[5]</sup>. We owe the continuation of this remarkable project to the tireless efforts of a group of Vienna-based scholars.

In this context, it is also important to mention free digitized bibliographies limited to specific fields such as the Bibliography of Gāndhārī Studies<sup>[6]</sup> and the Bibliography of Yogācāra Studies<sup>[7]</sup> which have taken into account East Asian publications, too. One hopes that in the coming years they will be upgraded from alphabetized lists to systematic and analytical bibliographies.

Historical surveys of Indian and Buddhist studies, whether comprehensive or dedicated to specific topics, have greatly benefited researchers by providing information on the merits and drawbacks of various works, editions, and translations. The monumental survey published by Ernst Windisch<sup>[8]</sup> over ninety years ago still remains a useful bibliographical tool for the history of Indian and Buddhist studies in Europe from its beginning to the early 20th century. Similarly, J. W. de Jong<sup>[9]</sup>'s opus dealing with Buddhist studies from their origins up to 1990 remains the most comprehensive survey of the field. The book, unfortunately, pays less attention to studies of East Asian Buddhism, but in all fairness it must be added that in his Preface, the author clearly states Indian Buddhism to be the focus of his survey. In this sense, very welcome is the appearance of a guide to Chinese Buddhist studies<sup>[10]</sup> provided by a research group based at Komazawa University, Tokyo. The group has also offered a second edition of a guide to Chan/Sōn/Zen studies<sup>[11]</sup>. It is hoped that other leading scholars, working alone or in teams, will also produce comprehensive surveys devoted to the history of their respective fields.

Bio-bibliographical works dedicated to a group or individual scholars can also be used for bibliographical references as well as research into the history of the field. Such information concerning not only Buddhologists but also Indologists, Tibetologists, Sinologists, Japanologists, and scholars in related areas has therefore been included in the present survey as much as possible. Like many other students of Indology and Buddhology, I have learnt a great deal from Valentina Stache-Rosen<sup>[1]</sup>'s opus on German Indologists. In this context, one is reminded of de Jong's words: "The study of Indian Buddhism has first of all to be seen as a branch of Indology" (op. cit.<sup>[1]</sup>, p 74).

In my survey, I have striven to include as much as possible information on reviews dedicated to particular works since quite a few of the critical reviews contain not only additions and/or corrections but also important scholarly discussions of the original work or material which forms the subject of the respective study, edition, or translation.

More than fourteen years have passed since the appearance of the first edition of my bibliographical survey<sup>1</sup>. This period has coincided with a huge transformation in the way scholarly research is conducted, presented, and accessed. Needless to say, first and foremost, this change is connected to the spread of the Internet and the development of information technology. As mentioned above, open online access to various sources has increased dramatically. It is thus a very welcome development to have all back issues of the IBK (印度學佛教學研究)<sup>[2]</sup> available on websites. One hopes to see other journals published by noncommercial organizations, especially institutions founded by Buddhist schools and sects in Japan, opened for public use as online sources. The appearance of two text databases of the Taishō edition of the Chinese Tripiṭaka<sup>[3]</sup>, respectively abbreviated as CBETA and SAT, has performed a service of inestimable value to the Buddhological and Buddhist community as well as to many other related disciplines. Furthermore, a great number of digitalized old and rare books, directly or indirectly connected to the study of Buddhism, have been freely provided by the Internet Archives, Google, some national libraries, and other organizations. Some special collections of Buddhist manuscripts and printed books have been or are in the process of being digitalized for public use, too. In any case, the Internet has become an essential tool for collecting comprehensive academic information and accessing digitalized materials. Using reliable online sources is therefore bound to increase the efficiency of research tremendously.

In this new version of my survey, itself an e-document, I have therefore tried to link relevant websites to the respective entries in order to give quick access to adequate online sources. I have also used the bookmark function in order to link respective entries to their reference sources. Readers can thus make use of the bookmarks (side-headings). All headings, names of sections, divisions, subdivisions, and subjects have thus been registered as bookmarks. Needless to say, additional materials have been entered and some printing errors and bibliographical inaccuracies in the previous versions of the survey have been corrected.

I must express here my deepest gratitude to Professors Junkichi Imanishi, Chancellor of the International College for Postgraduate Buddhist Studies, Toshinori Ochiai, President of the ICPBS, and Kyoko Fujii, Director of the Library of the same institution. My warmest thanks also go to Professor Dr. Florin Deleanu, Director of the International Institute for Buddhist Studies, who in spite of his busy schedule has kindly checked my poor English in the Preface and Notes. I am also grateful to Dr. Jonathan A. Silk, Professor at Leiden University and Director of the Kern Institute, who in his kind review<sup>2</sup> as well as in private discussions has recommended and encouraged me to offer a new version of this survey. I would also like to express my sincere thanks to other reviewers<sup>3</sup> of the former editions of my work. Their reviews brought to my attention several important materials which I had overlooked as well as some bibliographical inaccuracies.

I trust that this new contribution will be of some assistance first and foremost to young students of Buddhist studies and non-specialist librarians. At the same time, I would dare hope that this version will also benefit from criticism and suggestions of the academic community at large concerning whatever omissions and imperfections may still plague it. It is my intention to update this e-document every year also including, with due acknowledgement, additions and corrections which will reflect the help received from reviews and personal communications.

P.S.

The Buddhist Bibliography Project (affiliated to the ICPBS) was founded in April 2019 in order to facilitate the continuation of the survey and update of the basic bibliographical sources for Buddhist studies. Currently, the Project Director is Professor Dr. Florin Deleanu, and the Research Assistant is Ms. Kanako Shinga. As usual, we will post updates to the e-document twice a year, i.e. in April and October.

Notes

1. Coverage of entries

Sections A to J: Bibliographical works on Buddhist texts including inscriptions

(Catalogues, bibliographies, bibliographical information, introductions, and surveys)

Section K: General bibliographies of Buddhist and related studies

Section L: Contributions to histories or trends of Buddhist and related studies

Section M: Bio-bibliographical works devoted to individual scholars working in

Buddhist and related studies (Bibliographies, biographies, obituaries, collected works, papers, letters, etc.)

Section N: Indexes to periodicals

2. Classification of Buddhist Texts

In the wake of the dissemination of Buddhism from India to other Asian countries, its original scriptures were translated into various classical languages of the region and new texts in these languages began to be composed. For this reason, Buddhist texts have been classified according to the classical Asian language in which they have been transmitted. Entries are therefore classified into the following ten sections:

A: Buddhist texts in general

B: Sanskrit Buddhist texts

C: Buddhist texts in Pāli and related languages

D: Tibetan Buddhist texts (including Bon po texts)

E: Mongolian and Manchu Buddhist texts

F: Buddhist texts in Central Asian languages (Sogdian, Khotanese, Uigur, Tocharian, and Xixia)

G: Chinese Buddhist texts

H: Vietnamese Buddhist texts

I: Korean Buddhist texts

J: Japanese Buddhist texts

(NB: Strictly speaking, Buddhist texts in traditional Vietnam, Korea, and Japan were mostly composed in Classical Chinese. The classification above adopts these geo-cultural areas for convenience's sake.)

3. Description of entries

For each book entry, the following information is given: sequence number, main entry (author and/or title), edition, place of publication, name of publisher, date of publication, pagination, series title (in parentheses), and ISBN.

For each article entry, the following information is given: sequence number, author, title, name of publication (usually in abbreviated form), issue number, date of publication, and pagination.

English translations of Japanese titles are given in square brackets. English titles appearing in the respective publications are enclosed in parentheses.

Sequence number is enclosed in square brackets if a book is not held in the International College for Postgraduate Buddhist Studies (ICPBS) Library.

The full form of a person's name is used for headings in Section M. Family names are headed. In a case a person is more commonly known by initialed name(s), other scripts are enclosed in square brackets. The dates of birth and death are enclosed in parentheses after the full form of a person's name.

The romanized form of names is also used for headings of East Asian and Russian persons. Chinese and Cyrillic scripts are enclosed in parentheses.

4. Description of online sources and hyperlinks

Free access online sources are indicated in blue script, while chargeable online sources are in red script. Only free access reviews are indicated.

Click on the asterisks [*] attached to entries in red scripts in order to jump to the relevant reference sources in this e-document.

Click on the bookmarks displayed on the left-hand side in order to go or return to the specific locations in this e-document.

5. Romanization

Romanization of Japanese and Chinese authors and titles follow the original scripts of the publication in square brackets. Otherwise, romanization follows modified Hepburn and Wade-Giles systems respectively. The places of publication as well as the publishers, distributors, etc. are recorded in roman script only. For Korean authors, romanization follows the MacCune-Reischauer system.

Russian and Tibetan works are recorded in Roman script only. The romanization tables used here are those adopted by the American Library Association and the United States Library of Congress.

6. Abbreviations

Titles of periodical publications are often cited in abbreviated form. For the Western titles of journals, the abbreviations proposed in the Abkürzungsverzeichnis zur buddhistischen Literatur in Indien und Südostasien (hrsg. von Heinz Bechert, Göttingen, 1990) have been adopted as much as possible. As for Chinese titles, I have abbreviated English titles when they are provided in the publication itself and abbreviated the romanized title when no English translation is available. In the case of Japanese titles, romanized Japanese titles have been abbreviated.

If journal articles are available on websites, the volume number(s) and/or term(s) of the journals are also indicated in the respective title area(s) of the abbreviation table<sup>[*]</sup>.

Cf. Prods Oktor Skjærvø: F3.010<sup>[*]</sup>, xxv, xxvii-xxviii.

"In 1896 Macartney was approached by a Khotanese man called Islam Akhun who offered him manuscript finds purportedly from ancient sites in the desert. He purchased these and sent them to India where Hoernle started work on trying to decipher the unknown script — which at first sight resembled Indian Brahmi — and the language. Hoernle included some in his preliminary report in 1897 and gave a full report in 1899. In the latter he considered whether the manuscripts were forged but dismissed the idea, although he could not understand them. However, others were not convinced. In April 1901, Stein tracked down Islam Akhun in Khotan and questioned him closely. Islam Akhun finally admitted that he and colleagues had made these 'old books' themselves. Stein broke the news to Hoernle (by then retired) on his return to Britain. ...." Cf. <IDP: British Explorations in Chinese Central Asia> (Or.13873 and Or.13873/58)

The Schøyen Collection - Introduction: Buddhism collection <Online>

"As a gesture of goodwill, the Schoyen Collection gave seven fragments, that had already been published in 1932 and were part of the Hackin Collection, to the Afghan National Museum on September 5th, 2005. These fragments are now held by the Schoyen Collection on behalf of the Museum for security and preservation reasons only: they are no longer part of the Schoyen Collection itself. As part of the goodwill gesture, the Collection has also agreed to present the Museum with a further 43 or 44 manuscripts from the same provenance which would bring the Museum's holdings back up to its pre-war level of around 50 fragments."

Ingo Strauch: The Bajaur collection; a new collection of Kharoṣṭhī manuscripts: A preliminary catalogue and survey. 2008. 79 p. <Online>

"The Bajaur collection comprises altogether fragments from ca. 18 different birch-bark scrolls, written by at least 19 different scribes. The largest scroll (fragment 2) is more than 220 cm long, while the shortest birch bark fragment measures only about 6 cm (fragment 7). Similarly heterogeneous is the fragments' state of preservation. While some scrolls are almost completely preserved, many of them miss one side. A few are almost entirely broken into many small fragments."

A union list of printed Indic texts and translations in American Libraries. Comp. by M. B. Emeneau<sup>[*]</sup>. New Haven: American Oriental Society, 1935. xv, 540 p. (AOS<sup>[*]</sup>, 7)

Reprinted by Kraus Reprint in New York, 1967.

Nos. 3396a-3555: Pali canon and commentaries.

Nos. 3556-3637: Non-canonical Pali texts.

Nos. 3638-3913: Buddhist Sanskrit.

Nos. 2588-2772: Includes logical texts.

An excellent work commonly called "Emeneau's Union List". Bibliographical descriptions are very reliable. Arrangement is according to Sanskrit alphabetical order of the names of the authors, or, if the authors are unknown, of the titles. Canonical works with commentaries are separated from later texts and are arranged in the traditional canonical order. The appearance of a revised and enlarged edition is necessary.

On 1 July 1973, the Library collections of the British Museum were transferred to the British Library Board. In the spring of 1991, the India Office Library and Records (IOLR: transferred to British Library in 1982) was united with Oriental Collections (OC: formerly Department of Oriental Manuscripts and Printed Books, British Library) under the name of Oriental and India Office Collections (OIOC). The name was transferred to the Asia Pacific and Africa collections. In 2010 the department changed its name from Asia, Pacific and Africa Collections to Asian and African Studies.

This concordance is divided into four parts: I. Chinese to Pāli, II. Pāli to Chinese, III. Appendices, IV. Supplements and corrections. Titles of Chinese āgamas and Pāli nikāyas are compared with the corresponding number of Shukusatsu zōkyō (縮刷藏)<sup>[*]</sup>, Taishōzō (大正藏)<sup>[*]</sup>, and Pāli Text Society edition. Comparison of the Aṅguttara nikāya with Ekottarāgama is carried out; this was not done in the preceding work by Masaharu Anesaki, "The four Buddhist āgamas in Chinese" in TASJ<sup>[*]</sup>, XXXV, 3 (1908), 149 p.

On some recent editions of the Pāli Tipiṭaka. In: German scholars on India, 1. Varanasi: Chowkhamba Sanskrit Series Office, 1973. p. 123-135.

Four following editions are compared in this survey: A. The 2nd impression of the Burmese edition (B<sup>e</sup>) of the so-called Sixth Council in Rangoon, published 1958-1960. B. The 2nd and 3rd edition of the Siamese Tipiṭaka (S<sup>e</sup> as also S<sup>e2</sup> or S<sup>e3</sup>). C. The Devanāgarī edition in 41 volumes, 1956-1961 (N<sup>e</sup>). D. The prints of the 1st three Suttas of DN in: Bloch, Filliozat, Renou: Canon Bouddhique Pāli, t. 1, fasc. 1. Paris, 1949 (K<sup>e</sup>).

According to the results of author's study, B<sup>e</sup> has the best text; S<sup>e</sup> is nearly equal to it in value, but having more misprints; S<sup>e3</sup>, however, also has more variant readings.

The brief catalogues to the Narthang and the Lhasa Kanjurs: a synoptic edition of the Bka' 'gyur rin po che'i mtshan tho and the Rgyal ba'i bka' 'gyur rin po che'i chos tshan so so'i mtshan byañ dkar chag bsdus pa. Comp. by the Members of Staff, Indo-Tibetan Section of the Indologisches Seminar, Universität Bonn, issued on the occasion of Professor Dr. Claus Vogel's sixty-fifth birthday, July 6, 1998. Wien: ATBS<sup>[*]</sup>, 1998. 206 p. (WSTB<sup>[*]</sup>, 40)

This comparative catalogue is based on two indigenous Tibetan registers to the Kanjur of the Narthang and the Lhasa editions. The "Synoptic Text" contains titles as found in both registers, corresponding page numbers of Csoma de Kőrös's three papers and Feer's French translations, and corresponding catalogue numbers of the Cone, Derge, Lhasa, Peking Kanjurs, and some part of the Lithang and sTog Palace Kanjurs. "Key to Concordances" of the Cone, Derge, Lhasa and Peking Kanjurs, indices of Tibetan and Sanskrit titles and Tibetan names, and colophons without translator's names are included.

Enl. ed. (2012): ix, 684, 22 p. ISBN 978-4-8318-7361-3.

This work aims at clarifying the character and history of Buddhism in Dunhuang region in the period of the Tibetan occupation of Dunhuang (781-848), based on the Chinese and Tibetan manuscripts from there. Works of Tankuang (曇曠) and Facheng (法成 = Chos-grub)<sup>*1</sup>, who remained unknown within the mainstream of Chinese Buddhist history, are identified. A bibliographical and philological survey of Chinese texts lost or not transmitted into Central China is given. Critical edition of some Chinese and Tibetan texts is also provided. Includes index of the manuscript numbers utilized in this book.

The following two articles are added into an enlarged edition:

吳和尚藏書目錄について [Go Oshō zōsho mokuroku nit suite] [Note on a collection of books kept by 'go Chos grub], 647-660. <吳和尚 = 法成 = 'go Chos grub> <人名規範資料庫>

(Formerly St. Petersburg Branch of the Institute of Oriental Studies, Russian Academy of Sciences)

In 1930, this institution was organized on the basis of the Asiatic Museum and named "Institute of the Peoples of Asia". In 1968, it was renamed "Institute of Oriental Studies". Asiatic Museum was founded in 1818. On June 19, 2007, the Presidium of the Academy of Sciences ordered to reorganize the St. Petersburg Branch of the Institute of Oriental Studies into the independent Institute of Oriental Manuscripts. Present abbreviated name: IVR RAN in Russian or IOM RAS in English. <Website>
