

Introducing the ALT Open Access Repository

M25 Learning Technologist Group –

19 March 2010

<http://repository.alt.ac.uk/738/>

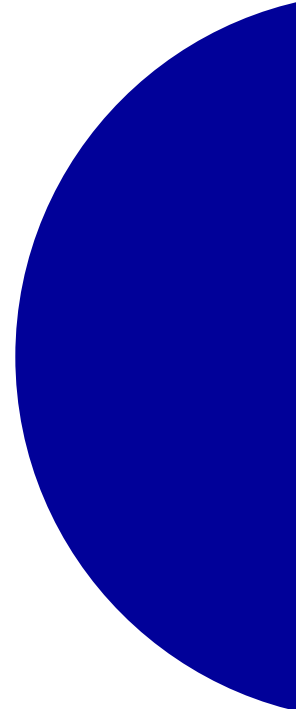

Background

The ALT Open Access Repository was established in 2009 under the JISC funded wALTer project. This project was a repository start-up project which ALT undertook together with project partner Cranfield University.

<http://repository.alt.ac.uk/information.html>

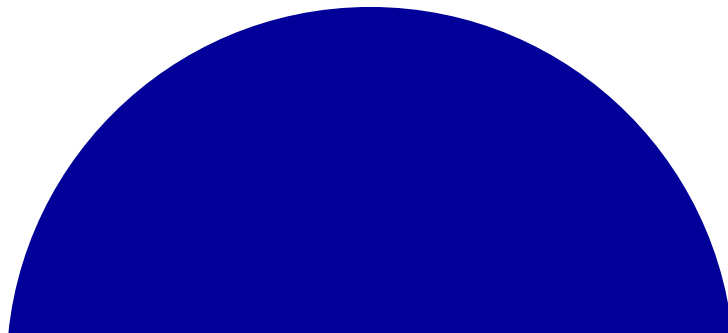

The repository was built using EPrints 3.

About the repository

The ALT Open Access Repository was established and remains independent from core funding and large funding programmes.

ALT has established the repository with a long-term commitment to support it and in this context we have established a Repository Policies Group, which advises on its development.

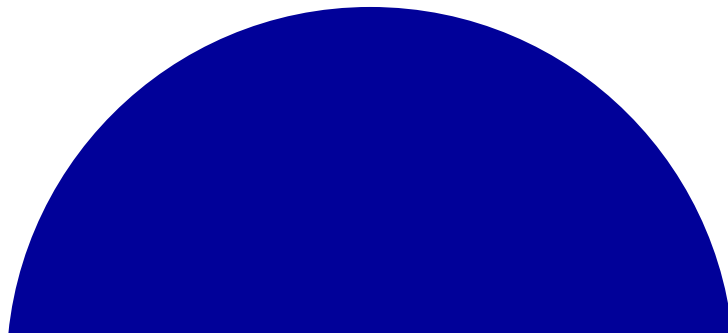

Current repository assets

The repository currently contains post-prints from the ALT-J journal from Vol.1 (1993) to Vol. 16 (2007) and will be updated periodically with new volumes 18 months after publication.

The repository also contains items relating to:

- ALT-C conference
- ALT events and webinars
- Learning Technology topics, events or publications
- ALT Members
- ALT SIGs

How to access the repository

<http://repository.alt.ac.uk>

You can access all items in the repository via this URL without signing in or registering. You can search for, browse and download each item and export citations in your preferred format. The repository has two subject trees: the Library of Congress subject tree and a Learning Technology based one which evolves as the repository grows.
