

Title	Sustaining Public Pensions in Canada: a Tale of Two Reforms
Author(s)	Battle, Ken
Citation
Issue Date	2002-04
Type	Technical Report
Text Version	publ isher
URL	http://hdl.handle.net/10086/14505
Right

Figure 1
Federal elderly benefits, single seniors, 1985

Figure 2
Total federal elderly benefits, single seniors, old (1985) and current (2000) systems

Figure 3
Federal elderly benefits, single seniors,
current system, 2000

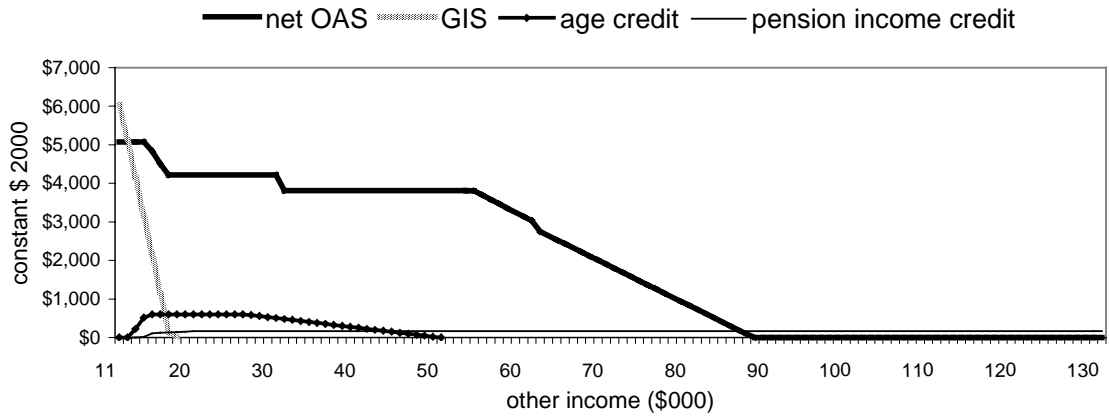

Figure 4
Change in federal elderly benefits, single seniors, current (2000) versus old (1985) systems

Figure 5
Change in federal elderly benefits, as % of income, single seniors, current (2000) versus old (1985) systems

Figure 6
Elderly benefits for single senior,
current system and proposed Seniors Benefit, 2001

Figure 7

Figure 8
Gains and losses from proposed Seniors Benefit, single seniors, 2001

Figure 9
Gains and losses from proposed Seniors Benefit,
as % of other income, single seniors, 2001

Figure 10
Gains and losses from proposed
Seniors Benefit, one-income couples, 2001

Figure 13
Gains and losses from proposed Seniors Benefit,
as % of other income, two-income couples, 2001

Figure 14
Elderly benefits expenditures
(OAS/GIS/SPA) as % of GDP, 1952-2100

Figure 15
Marginal tax rates, single seniors living in Ontario,
current system and proposed Seniors Benefit, 1997

Figure 11
Gains and losses from proposed Seniors Benefit,
as % of other income, one-income couples, 2001

Figure 12
Gains and losses from proposed
Seniors Benefit, two-income couples, 2001

