11. SNAPPER, I.: Private Communication.

Erratum

Dr. Rothman has called to my attention that he did not say that all cases of infection with T. rubrum involving areas of the skin other than the palms, soles and nails are readily healed. He only stated that in his reported cases with eminently chronic involvement of palms, soles and nails, lesions appearing elsewhere did respond to therapy; but he did not draw any general conclusions. Furthermore, Dr. Rothman informs me that in his experience, too, most lesions of the glabrous skin caused by T. rubrum are therapy-resistant. I am glad to correct this misunderstanding and to know that my observations are in agreement with those of Dr. Rothman.

MORRIS WAISMAN, M.D.